RIOTS ALL OVER CITY OPEN BIG PHILADELPHIA TRACTION LINE STRIKE

Mobs in the Great Textile District Overturn Cars, Stone Strikebreakers, Set Fire to Rolling Stock and Generally Overrun All Protective Measures Taken by the Transit Company

Police Department Taken Wholly Unawares and Powerless to Meet the Emergency—Union Leaders Declare Issue Is Forced Upon the Employes. Showdown of Forces Monday

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 19.—For the second time in nine months, the union motormen and conductors of the Rapid Transit Company went on strike to-day, tying up many of the more important lines of the city. Serious rioting took place to-night which resulted in many persons being arrested and others badly hurt by stones and other missiles.

Rioting was general throughout the Kensington textile section this evening. Many persons were injured by flying bricks and stones, including a sergeant of the Belgrade and Clearfield police station; two trolley cars were burned and three others were wrecked, while the police made wholesale arrests.

CARS STONED BY AN ANGRY MOB OF 10,000.

The worst disturbance occurred along Kensington avenue, between Somerset and Clearfield streets, where at least 10,000 strike sympathizers assembled. They seemed eager for trouble and a call was sent for a special detail of policemen.

Before they arrived the crowd broke loose. Six cars coming up Kensington avenue, were held up, and stones and bricks were hurled freely at the trolleys and crews. Small boys dodged behind the cars and pulled the poles from the wires, while the police seemed helpless to stop the proceedings.

In the midst of the excitement two of the cars suddenly burst into flames. An alarm was sounded and several fire engines responded, plowing through the crowds. They started playing streams of water on the cars, with occasional squirts that scattered the bolder part of the throng crowding too close to the scene.

The arrival of the reinforcements from the station house broke up the violent demonstrations for the time being. A number of arrests were made and the crowd finally driven back.

There was disorder at Forty-fourth and Jefferson streets this afternoon which was

GOV. DRAPER WINS THE UNION CLUB BILLIARD MATCH

Rivals Far Behind Executive When It Comes to Real Speed.

CRANE AND RIPLEY LOSERS

Son of State's Chief Also Something Good as Operator on Green Cloth.

M. L. T. has not put it all over Harvard and Yale at billiards in the defeat of Joshua Crane and Alfred Lawrence Ripley by Ethel Sumner Draper.

"Carpet, who" said the chief bulletin board.

This time the Governor was entered in a billiard tournament, instead of a contest at the polls, but he won it, probably from force of habit, with all the odds against him. The tournament was held at the Union Club in Park street, that abode of gentlemen founded in Civil War times as a rendezvous for loyalists who wanted to come together in friendly communion with, but being compelled to listen to copperhead orators.

The Union is one of those ultra-conservative institutions where one is proposed for membership by one's grandfather. This, at least, is what the average man says of it. Nevertheless they have billiard tables and go on at the Union Club and once in a while they hold a tournament.

Twenty years ago the Governor of Massachusetts was a billiard player of acknowledged powers. That was when he was selling machines for the great Draper Company, of Hopedale. As he grew older and his responsibilities increased, the Governor reluctantly abandoned the green baize table and put his cue back in the rack.

Eben, Jr., is Some Player.

However, there has always been a billiard table in the Draper home, and when Eben Sumner, Jr., came to the billiard age, a couple of years ago, and began to show a liking for the favorite indoor sport of his father, the Governor got back into the game. Friends of the family say it is no secret in Beacon street that the Governor is no match for Eben Sumner, Jr., who shows a real gift for billiards, but this isn't known at the Union Club and it is just as well that nothing be said about it, for a day or two, in order that the Governor may continue to enjoy the fruits of his victory.

What do you suppose they call the Governor of this Commonwealth at the Union Club? Promise not to tell? They call him the "Mog hunter from Beacon street!"

The Governor goes down the street to the Union Club every afternoon soon after 1 o'clock. He has then been in official harness since 9 in the morning. He allows himself a couple of hours for luncheon.

A year or two ago, feeling the need of relaxation after four hours of hard work, meeting all sorts of people from every corner of the State, reading this and replying to that, smoothing out the ruffled feathers of one man who hasn't got the appointment he wanted, admonishing another who caused you his first cigar in service on one of the State's unpaid boards, the Governor decided one day to step down stairs, after luncheon, and knock the billiard balls around for a minute. He has been going down stairs at the Club about every day since that time.

The Big Ones at Play.

Drop in at the Union Club almost any day at the luncheon hour and you are apt to see some pretty big lawyers and some well-known bankers, and possibly a judge or two, knocking the balls around. Judge Braley of the Supreme Judicial Court, Judge Marcus Morton, Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, Melvin O. Adams, Arthur Dehon Hill, Herbert Parker, Robert M. Morse, Charley Choate, Hugh Bancroft, fill in the list for yourself, but make them all top-notchers.

Well, after awhile they began to take notice, up there, that His Excellency, the Chief Magistrate of the Commonwealth, is no slouch at billiards, dye see, and when the tournament came along the committee put it right up to him that he ought to enter.

You want to know what when the Governor goes up the steps into the Union, he isn't the Governor any more. No—o! When he gets out of Park street, he's just "Draper;" so the chairman of the committee said. "Draper," he said, "of course you'll go in on the tournament," and "Draper," who makes up his mind quickly and sticks to it (being a Draper), said, "It's a bet," or whatever they say at the Union Club when they mean "sure!"

The Governor is reasonably proud of his

Boston Actress Claims Big Estate as 'Widow'

MISS MURIEL BRANDT

Miss Muriel Brandt, a Retired Actress, Applies for Share in $70,000 Property.

MISS KATHLEEN M. MOOT—Muriel Brandt, as the stage knows her—says that a woman CAN keep a secret. She can prove it. For eight years, she says, she has been the wife of Samuel C. Smith, who died recently at Cincinnati, N. Y., and never whispered it to a soul. Yesterday she told the story, when she laid claim to the widow's share of Smith's $70,000 estate.

Her claim is disputed by the administrators of Smith's estate, but she declares emphatically that she can prove it and says that she is going to be just as quiet as she has been in showing the world that she was married as she has been diligent in concealing the romantic fact for eight years. She has asked the new York State courts to help her.

Mrs. Smith is not on the stage now. For she has a small fortune of her own, lives in the best society, and her parents made her give up her footlight ambitions. Her home is in Tremont street, but she lives most of the time on a farm that she owns in Central New York. She went to the stage from the Emerson School of Oratory, where she studied ten years ago, when in her teens. It was soon after that she married Smith, also young and rich.

Married by a J. P.

Mrs. Smith's parents lived near Canastota, and she met Smith there when they were children. When they grew older she came to Allston to study and liked the city so well that she kept her home here. Smith followed, and, according to Miss Moot, they were married March 7, 1902. A justice of the peace performed the ceremony. She was twenty-two, he twenty-nine. They agreed to keep it a secret because she feared it would interfere with her stage ambitions. She even used an assumed name, it is said.

The heirs and executors of the Smith estate are on good terms with "Miss" Moot, but were taken completely by surprise when she told them, blushingly, that she was the young man's widow. Yesterday her lawyer, Clarence Rowley of Boston, declared that there was ample proof of the marriage and it would be submitted in due time, in reply to a statement that the executors had disregarded the claim, Mr. Rowley said:

"The marriage was performed on March 7, 1902. We have the marriage certificate, the affidavits of the witnesses, letters from Smith acknowledging her as his wife, and much other evidence, including the wedding ring, inscribed 'S. C. C. to K. M., March 7, 1902.' The ring is also marked 'B. & C. 18k.' I would like to hear from the man who sold or inscribed the ring. I believe it was purchased by Mr. Smith in Boston.

"I only discuss the case because in

HALL'S FULL CONFESSION OF $500,000 LOOT

Former Treasurer of Southbridge Bank Tells in Jail Cell How for Years He Stole From Poor and Plunged Recklessly In Stock Gambling, Tortured by Conscience and on Verge of Suicide

"I Went on a Long Vacation Leaving Glaring Errors In Books, Expecting to be Caught," He Says, But on My Return They Greeted Me With Smiles." Prisoner Urges Safeguards for Banks

SOUTHBRIDGE, Feb. 19—John A. Hall, former treasurer of the Southbridge Savings Bank, of the town of Southbridge and of the Young Men's Christian Association of this place, has told the whole story of how he stole nearly $500,000 of the deposits of the savings bank and how he spent the money.

This confession, made after he had wandered about for a week and had decided that the best thing for him was to give himself up and take the punishment due him, was made in his cell in the Worcester jail.

The confession consists of about 12,000 words, and there are several copies of it in existence. Arthur H. Chapin, commissioner of savings banks in this State, has one of the copies. Calvin D. Paige, president of the closed bank, has another.

Hall tells how he was caught in the edge of the maelstrom of speculation through the investment of $100—a trivial sum to him; how he got deeper in the water, and nearer the centre of the whirlpool, until he was sucked down in the financial vortex beyond possible help. His first theft was $100, his last $50,000.

There are men who handled his money and who must have been cognizant of the fact that he was stealing it—who must have waited knowing full well what the end must be; who failed to watch another pillar of property crash to the ground and the [illegible] of the sepulchre crumble that was to expose in all its glaring nak[illegible]ness man's sins that had been hidden so successfully for sixteen years.

These men, Boston bankers and [illegible]ve seen what they must have anticipated, and [illegible] something else, for it is not beyond the realm of [illegible]ssibility that some of the laws of the State are living, vital facts instead of pa[illegible]nt some of these men may be brought to book in an effort to [illegible]ver some of the money of the working people of Southbridge and surrounding towns that was pilfered and lost in stock transactions.

HALL GIVES NAMES OF MEN WHO KNEW.

Hall has given the names of these banking and brokerage firms, and in great detail has told how he speculated with each house. He has named the men whom he dealt with personally and by telephone. He has given the original letters, receipts for moneys paid and statements of amounts won and lost the brokerage houses always sent to their clients.

These statements, and letters, the whole correspondence covering Hall's long period of speculation—proves the truth of Hall's statements.

Some of these brokers' letters show great winnings and great losses. Time and again Hall could have stopped his reckless speculation, and retired with a comfortable fortune.

Hall was nearly always a "bull" on the market. That is, he bought for a rise in prices. He seldom sold "short," but when the 1906 panic came he was swamped by his losses, and his really big stealings began then.

Hall says he was living at the rate of $20,000 a year. He had the best of everything—every luxury, without ostentation.

No feature of his confession is more striking than the part of it that refers to his home life, and his wife.

"This is one of the very few great defalcations," Hall said, "in which there is no second woman. There is no woman at all in this case. No woman ever got a penny from me. I was, and am, in love with my wife. I have never known any other woman, actress or what not, and at least in that respect I feel different than other defaulters must feel.

"MY WIFE HAD NO SUSPICION OF MY THEFTS."

"My wife had no suspicion of my thefts. She did not know my business. She did not know I was stealing. She never questioned me. She had all faith in me. She thought I was a good business man, that's all."

The Sunday American is able to give other portions of Hall's remarkable confession.

"Since I have been here in this jail," said Hall, "my mind has traveled back over the weary years of my life that are crime stained. The picture looms up before my eyes brightest just before I close them in sleep—the last thing that I see mentally at night, the first thing that I see when I awake.

"And if I can leave a word of warning here for the good of the young men of the State—young men who started in life with hopes as rosy as mine—I want to speak it. This is what I want to say to our boys:

"Don't take wrongfully the first dollar. Do without necessities of life first. It is better to starve than to steal.

"All big crimes start with little ones. And I want to tell you right here that though a sinner may repent, he can not bring back the happiness that he has stolen from others—he can not restore the broken lives and broken homes that were shattered by his criminal acts.

"It was a little thing that I first did and that was more than a dozen years ago. I was the treasurer of the town, a man thought above suspicion. Indeed, I thought myself above suspicion and when I pilfered my first dollar, for that was what it amounted to, I did not look at it in the light of stealing. I thought that I would borrow it and replace it later.

"Nearly every bank defalcation starts just in that way. I remember that I bought a ten-share block of stock of the Atchison railroad. I bought it on margin, putting up $10 a share. A friend came to me and told me that it was a good speculation and that the stock would rise in a few days.

"You may see that there was not much of the real gambler in me at that time or on a tip like that I should have gone deeper into the matter then taking a chance on ten shares. Well, the man who had given me the information was right. The stock went up, and on the $100 I cleared $25.

"I had done nothing for this money. It was money that did not belong to me, but it seemed that I could make plenty of money if I kept right at it. My banking

29 MEN CAUGHT IN LYNN GAMBLING RAID

Police Swooped Down on Barricaded Den, After Scaling Roof; Smash Entrance.

Policemen with axes and ladders last night broke into one of the best-fortified gambling establishments ever found in Lynn, and arrested twenty-nine men, charged with gambling.

Three green covered tables, playing cards, dice and $150 in cash were seized by the police as evidence. The money was in quarters.

It was a raid such as Lynn has not seen in a generation. Sergeant McBrien was in charge of the squad and with him were Patrolmen Sears and Hall. The place is in the top story of the four-story building at No. 88 Willow street.

It was far too well fortified to be caught by the ordinary raiding methods. According to the police, who tried in vain to get results last week, there were double-barred doors on the place, peepholes from which to watch for police, grates on the windows and electrical devices to warn of the coming of strangers.

Sergeant McBrien tried new tactics. With his squad he climbed to the roof of an adjoining building. They crossed over by means of ladders and then the police began work with their axes.

With three swings Sears broke his way through the first window and leaped in head first. The sight of his uniform and the noise he made threw the crowd into a panic. The double barred doors, however, which had successfully kept out the police, worked against the men in the place. They were caught in their own trap.

Hall and McBrien followed Sears in quick order and within a minute the entire twenty-nine men were under arrest.

When Sears landed the room he dropped on a nickel. He picked it up as evidence. When he got to his feet he picked another off the table. The men in their hurry to clean up had overlooked it.

The whole squad was marched down to police headquarters and Chief Bureka ordered the men searched. The flood of quarters surprised even the chief. There were just 800 of them, making a total of $150.

The men will be arraigned Monday. Edward Mullen, who is said to be proprietor of the place, will be charged with maintaining a gambling nuisance.

PLANNED TO DRIVE POPE FROM ROME

Anti-Clericals Attempted War on the Vatican, But Were Dissuaded.

ROME, Feb. 19.—An attempt was recently made by Italian anti-clericals to initiate an open war against the Vatican, with the object of forcing the Pope to leave Rome. Naturally it was realized at the beginning that the undertaking was difficult of realization, still the anti-clericals determined to wage war on the Vatican, even at the risk of revolution.

What deterred them from the attempt at present is the fear of international complications, and especially armed foreign interference in defence of the Papacy. Signor Ettore Ferrari, Grand Master of the Italian Free Masons, discarded the anti-clericals lest Austria rush in to aid the Vatican and seek a pretext for a war against Italy. Other anti-clerical leaders share the same view. They allude to war with Austria as the inevitable result of a campaign against the Vatican.

Antonio Maffi, fears a civil war.

Luigi Mainieri opposes the expulsion of the Pope. He says it is better to watch your enemies at close quarters. The scheme fell through, Umberto Votari, its initiator, admitting that it was useless and dangerous.

GIBSON HAS A SON.

Chicago Playwright Now Boasts a "Senatorial Baby."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 19.—Preston Gibson, the Chicago playwright, who says that he will expose the "system" that runs Congress in his new play, is not only an author, but he is a father.

A son was born to-day to Mr. and Mrs. Gibson. The present Mrs. Gibson was Miss Grace McMillan Jarvis, granddaughter of former Senator McMillan of Michigan, and as Mr. Gibson is the son of a Senator it might be called a "senatorial baby."

TILLMAN IS BETTER.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Senator Tillman, who is critically ill, was slightly improved to-night. The bulletin issued by his physicians at 8 p. m. stated that the outlook for the senator was better than it had been in twenty-four hours.

Reichstag President Dead.

BERLIN, Feb. 2.—Count Zu Stolberg Wernigerode, president of the Reichstag, died to-day.

500 BURIED WHEN THEATRE COLLAPSES

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Feb. 19.—Five hundred men, women and children were precipitated to the basement of the opera house at Felton, Pa., a small town near this city during a theatrical performance. One, at least, is known to be dead, several fatally injured and scores hurt and bruised.

Two stoves used to heat the auditorium were overturned and set fire to the clothes of the struggling victims.

Quick action on the part of a volunteer fire company prevented a holocaust.

The supports of the building, which is very primitive to be used for theatrical purposes, gave way under the pressure of an unusually large audience, caused the accident.

SINGER TOO BUSY TO WED.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—"Sheriff Bob" Chanler of Dutchess county has been stung in a vital spot by the love bug. He has hopes of marrying Lina Cavalieri, the most beautiful woman in the world, not to mention being one of Oscar Hammerstein's most costly exponders of colorature and cabaret.

No reason why "Sheriff Bob" should not marry her, provided the singer is willing. He's rich, he's one of the millionaire grandsons of John Jacob Astor, and besides his polished prestige as a former sheriff and leader of the Dutchess county Democracy he's an artist. That is to say, he paints in oils and he has a studio at No. 521 Fifth avenue.

He's mighty proud of the fact that he is in love with the operatic beauty. He admitted to-day that he had asked Mlle. Cavalieri to marry him, and just as frankly added that he couldn't extract an answer from her to save his life.

Nothing doing when the question was put up to the Madamoiselle at the Astonia, after "Sheriff Bob's" tender confession. She couldn't be disturbed. She was going to sing "Carmen" at the Manhattan last night.

LOOTER HALL GIVES NAMES OF MEN WHO HANDLED BANK'S STOLEN CASH

Man Now in Jail Declares He Laid Traps for Himself, but Couldn't Get Caught.

acquaintance made it easy for me to get information as to stocks that were liable to rise and I saw before me an easy life—a life of plenty without any particular harm being done to any one.

"For, mind you, all this time and all the rest of the time during the horrible years that followed—years that rise up in hideous aspect before me as I speak—I always intended to pay back every dollar that I took.

"I hoped that Fate, or luck, or some other fetitious goddess, would touch my hand with a magic wand and that it would be able to grasp from the inferior mass the world gold in such quantities that I would be able to restore every dollar that I took.

"So, that $25 that I made at first was the pebble that became a millstone about my neck.

"It was not long after this that another chance at speculation came to me. It seemed just as good a thing as the other one, and I went into it.

Began to Grow Greedy.

"But safe time I had already begun to grow greedy. I was not satisfied to take $100 and buy ten shares of stock on margin. This time I took $1,000 and bought 100 shares. Again things went my way, and from that time on my life was one thing after another. The easy money of the early days was gone, but the fact was I was supposed to be a success. The fact was I was a gambler. I knew it, and the fact bothered me not a bit. What I saw in my self was the man who was going to get rich myself and save from my pack that growing weight that was to finally pull me down and chain me to a prison cell.

"What, in my mad desire to get rich myself and save from my pack that growing weight that was to finally pull me down and chain me to a prison cell.

"What, in my mad desire to get rich again—to free my mind of the crushing burden that weighed it down—I did not hesitate to take as much as $50,000 at one time.

"Then I had my first taste of real success and my career of same ended. Since then I have been able to figure—I did nearly all of my speculating in books. I did it with various drugs and the investments of trust I had.

"I bought cotton, and corn, and wheat and general stocks. I followed the run of my own judgment. And I found that my own judgment was generally much better than information that was given me as 'inside' and 'ground floor' tests.

"I also played poker, and one would be surprised at how much money may be made or lost at this game.

It Was Easy to Take Money.

"Being town treasurer and treasurer of the savings bank made it easy, the way things went, for me to take money. For instance, if there was a shortage to be made up when the town affairs were to be examined, all I had to do was to borrow money from the savings bank—that is, take it and transfer it. And vice versa.

"Then there was another scheme that proved very successful. If there was a shortage that I wished to account for in the savings bank I used to take the names of prominent men who had borrowed the money and who were perfectly good for it and whose supposed transaction would not be questioned for a moment.

"Of course, these things would not have availed if there had been any suspicion of me, but there was not. I never had any detectives following me to see where I went, with whom I associated, how and where I spent my money. I was not out on the grill of examination and humiliation to explain how all things stood in the bank. I simply took money from it and put it back, but it is a fact.

How He Tried to be Caught.

"One day and, if this is true, why I did not act like a man and go up to the bank officials and tell them what I had done? Of course, I was not a coward in this action. But a man who had been stealing so long, less many months ago, would never accept to stand again. I actually tried to get some one to expose me. I told men who thought me honest, who believed me to be a man of honor, that I had this or that held down my lip, whose name I had advanced money on, and I asked them for them to go to see me this and say to them:

"'Don't steal the first dollar,' for I have been a thief all these years when you have thought me honest, and I do not do it.

"And I would have gone without a word of protest, gladly to the penitentiary that I had come to me and mine now.

Waiting For Detectives.

"But the fates grew grim and the leaves took on their autumn foliage and the ting of frost came into the air—and I returned home, respected.

"At the bank I was greeted with warm handshakes and words of friendship and affection. Remarks were made to the effect that they hoped the cattle had fared me good, in a way that made me think that some of the money that was going into my heart had shown on my face.

"And so I went back to work handling money that rightfully belonged to others because I knew not what minute it would be found out and I would be sent to jail.

"Don't Steal the First Dollar," He Warns Young Men, "for It Means Thousands."

another wild endeavor to regain my lost self.

"I took the train for Boston at another time with the same feeling that I had when I went on my honeymoon. Summer outing. As I got on the train I looked out through the window at the familiar sights of the town to which so many years had been spent, wondering when and how I would see it all again.

"Because this was another attempt by me to be found out? I left papers behind me and intimations that I was going to discover dark could have discovered. For instance, I had left in Boston, I knew, interested in stocks and played poker and occasionally took a drink—anything to give the notion until I should be tapped on the shoulder by a detective and told that I was wanted at the bank.

Even Contemplated Suicide.

"But three days and nights passed and there was no call for me—nothing happened to me. I went to the bank and looked over the telephone. Often it crossed my mind to call up the bank officials and tell them that I had taken it, but I never quite got to it.

"And it was then that came to me that it would be best to blot out the life that was now nothing but a burden to me. I would not have the nerve to kill myself, but I would put an end to it all in a moment, and let me and misfortune go hand in hand into the bowels of the broken circles and knit them together in the dark world. Like a bombshell I could not do that either.

"And so I went back home to the point where I must confess that I have been a pitiable coward—a coward when I first set to taking the $1,000, a coward when I followed it up, and a coward when I refused to go to the bank officials and tell them all and take my punishment.

"I pretended from then on that I got the same smile of confidence that had begun to wear on the grinning of an ape, and was to pursue me always—always.

"I decided from then on that a man who had done what I did, and who wanted to be thought square, could not be thought free so long.

"There was some talk about my mental condition and some talk about my peculiarities of behavior, but I was a member of the board of trustees of savings banks and examiners are not looked into with scrupulous exactitude. That is something that the trustees of savings banks and examiners of all kinds of banks should not forget. This thing of saying, 'Oh, his books are all right,' and 'he is all right,' or 'he is as honest as the day is long' is a fallacy that should never be allowed to exist, and if there is never another case like mine, mine is sufficient to establish that fact.

"But I even hinted time and time again that my books should be examined. What was the result? The total indifference of my standing in the city had been in the bank officials! I was the town treasurer and they had never allowed a thought that if there was anything wrong with me the town would have found it out. You see the argument. I was treasurer of the Loring Sons Christian Association and had dealt with that great organization, and surely a man who did that would not steal. That was another supposed fence against the addition of sand.

"I was regarded as a good fellow, a good-natured fellow. I gave money away as though I were giving alms of water that gushed from the earth. The poorest tramp that walked the street never went away from me empty handed. Mine was always among the first names on every subscription list.

Put Two Through College.

"I put at least two persons through college. I gave to the church more than my share, and I gave to charity that did not belong to me. But they were blameless, and I hope that they will never know. I gave away money that I had embezzled me so bitterly in the past, and long as I did.

"When the Young Men's Christian Association was being built in Dixie, they came to me. Would I help them out? Certainly. And I gave them as much as $5,000 a year, time when they were badly behind. I gave $5,000 at one lump.

"The money went for a good cause, any how. It was the money of a man who had worked in the mills; of girls who were struggling to get through school and work for themselves; of others who were more fortunate. And I was one of the trustees of the Young Men's Christian Association and no one to betray, although the manner in which I had come by the money inclined with the act that has spelled my life.

"I have lost a great many persons tell me that I have lost my mind. I do not think I can not always sympathy. I am paying the penalty for my folly—for my acts—for my betrayal of trust, a breaking of the law that will end with my death.

"And yet nothing that the law can hold me to account for can be as great a suffering than the tortures of a conscience that is still alive to the sense of the most magnificent opera. The income that I have received as the result of my crime is buried and in the home that should have been a happy haven for my wife and children.

A Fever of Speculation.

"I have given the bank officials all the information I can, and I have hope that out of the tangled affairs something may still be done to help those who have been robbed. What I have done, I have done. There was no excuse, there can be no excuse for such a thing.

"It all goes back to the one thing—to the first dollar that I took from the fever of speculation that took hold of me; and then the awful, frightful fact that I was a defaulter and my whole life and the happiness of my family were at stake.

"Of course, it must be remembered that I did not go into the matter deliberately. I did not go into it with the intention to put back the money I had taken. I was just enough to give me the incentive to try my hand at a stroke of chance I would again get on my feet and be able to hold up my head before the world and look the face without a shrinking of my heart that became a coward.

Suffers More Than Victims.

"But after it is all said and done, it was the same old story. When I used to be a boy at Sunday school I was always impressed with the moral of the story. I remember that I have never forgotten—yes, it is burned in with a red hot iron—that 'he who steals from your sin will find you out!' Mine has found me out and penance is all that I can do.

"If by opening an artery in my heart and letting the blood flow out I could be buried in full for the misery that I have caused, I would do it with a smile and thank God as the shadow of death wrapped me in eternal slumber.

"But that is not the law of life. All that I can do now is hope that some of my victims will ever suffer as I have done and as I am doing now."

Attorney Demands Right to Be Present at Investigation, and That's Where Hitch Comes.

CHARLES F. CHOATE, JR., counsel for the big folks of Southbridge, who are behind the Southbridge Savings Bank, wants to be in the back next Wednesday with the investigating committee from the Legislature. Choate's request has started a fight in the committee. The committee has met to organize, and has failed to organize, spending two hours fighting over Choate. They meet again Wednesday.

Certain members of the committee say Choate should be present. Certain other members say Choate should not be present only when the general public is present, that, regardless of the fact that Choate is a member of the Republican State Committee and was long legislative counsel for the New Haven Railroad, he is entitled to no special privileges at a time when the public wants the facts about the $425,000 failure at Southbridge and wants them without fear or favor.

Dodging the Question.

The investigating committee is on the job to get the facts, and the members of the committee met on Friday to talk the situation over and draw up plans. They were in session two hours. They failed to elect a clerk. The State House reporters waited for them. The committee had "nothing to give out" except that they had gone to Southbridge next Wednesday, and would spend the day in the savings bank, "getting the lay of the land," and the evening in Town Hall.

"And so has it taken two hours to get together on that program?" the reporters wanted to know. "What have you been fighting about?"

Chairman White of the Senate and several of his committeemen dodged the question.

The betting last night was 10 to 1 that Charles F. Choate, Jr., would not face the committee's first probe of the Southbridge Bank. Charles F. Choate, Jr., will get his call and if you don't like it never mind.

It may be of some service to Senators White and Greenwood, Representatives Dow and Warren and Washburn and Cavanaugh, to know that at Southbridge last night there were savings bank depositors who stood up the present attention something after this fashion:

Sounds Like Choate.

Counsel for the bank, Charles F. Choate, Jr.

Counsel for the trustees, Charles F. Choate, Jr.

Counsel for George W. Wells, president of the American Optical Company and one of the directors, Charles F. Choate, Jr.

Counsel for the State of Massachusetts in the case of Bank Examiner Joseph Blanchard, and although the State of Massachusetts was awakened to the fact, Charles F. Choate, jr.

Counsel for Treasurer John A. Hall—well, the attorney of the bank is George A. Gaskill of Worcester.

TWO OF SOUTHBRIDGE BANK TRUSTEES ARE ABSENT, DESPITE PROBE

SOUTHBRIDGE, Feb. 19.—Two of the trustees of the Southbridge Bank, which Treasurer John A. Hall wrecked, live in town, while another, it is understood, expects to go to-morrow.

The two who live here are George W. Wells, president of the optical company, left town to-day, and it became known that he was going to Florida. Florida is his objective. When he is to return is not known yet.

Caleb D. Paige, president of the Southbridge Savings Bank, the institution under legislative inquiry, and which was looted of more than $400,000 by its treasurer, it is said, is to leave Southbridge to-morrow on a trip to Mexico. His visit is also said to be for the definite time of two months.

Causing additional comment in town today was the announcement that the optical company discharged eighteen carpenters last night and five of its steam fitters and plumbers. The operations of the company, from this, are continuing as they have been.

FEAR WOMAN WHO VANISHED IS DEAD

Mrs. Lena M. Caswell, forty-eight years old, of No. 44 Fairmount street, Dorchester, has disappeared. For nine days her husband, son and daughter have hunted for her in vain. Distracted and fearing that she may have ended her life, they appealed to the police yesterday. Adding to the fears that she may have done away with herself is the note she left before going.

"There is no need to search for me."

She had $2 with her when she left. She had no extra clothing and nowhere to go. On January 29 Mrs. Caswell was found in her room overcome by gas. She recovered rapidly. At that time it was believed

MATRIMONIAL MIXUP AMAZES SOCIETY IN LYNN

Son of Ex-Mayor Walden Reveals Secret Wedding by Divorce Suit.

LYNN, Feb. 19.—Suit for divorce was filed today in Salem against Mrs. Marian Josephine Hill Walden by Edwin Walden, son of the late Mayor Edwin Walden of Lynn and one-time president of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad. Two weeks ago Mrs. Marian Josephine Hill Harmon filed a petition in the Middlesex County Court in East Cambridge, asking to be appointed administratrix of the estate of the late Colby D. Harmon of Swampscott.

The alleged marital tangle is one of the strangest in the history of Essex and Middlesex counties.

Lynn society is astounded by the suit of Walden, a son and heir of one of Lynn's oldest and most wealthy families, asking to be freed from a woman to whom he claims to have been secretly wedded more than seven years ago in Providence. No person in Lynn has ever known until today that Edwin Walden was other than a widower, his first wife having died a dozen years ago.

Sensation was doubled when it became known that the very woman from whom Walden is now seeking freedom has asked the Middlesex County Probate Court to recognize her right as widow of another man that she might administer the property and claim a widow's share of it.

Claimed to Be Widow.

Marian Josephine Hill Hanor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Hill of No. 583 Salem street, Malden, two weeks ago petitioned the Probate Court in East Cambridge to be made administratrix of the estate of Colby D. Harmon, whom she claimed was her husband, and with whom she had lived as his wife in Somerville for at least two years.

Harmon was a fireman on the Boston & Maine railroad. Late in December he received injuries from which he died. Harry F. Harmon of Cliftondale, brother of the dead man opposed the petition of the alleged widow and the case comes up for a hearing on February 25.

Harmon investigated and he alleges that he found a record in the State House showing that Marian Josephine Hill had been married to Edwin Walden of Lynn. He sought Mr. Walden.

The suit was filed today through the office of Attorney Edward J. C. Coughlin of this city. It asks for divorce from Mrs. Marian Josephine Hill Walden, alleging that the couple were secretly married in Providence on February 14, 1906.

Attorney Coughlin, it is said, went to see teh woman and when he demanded of her to know when she had ever divorced Mr. Walden and when she had, she was asking in be administratrix of the estate of Colby D. Harmon, she failed.

Inherits Valuable Property.

Edwin Walden is one of the heirs to the valuable real estate left when his father died. William Walden of the firm of Hoag & Walden, shoe manufacturers, is a brother. He has another brother in business here and a married sister.

Fear that the announcement of his secret marriage would prove a fatal shock to his mother who was at that time ill, prevented Walden's revealing the secret of his marriage. He lived with Marian Josephine Hill, his bride, but a few days when they decided, so Walden said, to separate for six months and keep their marriage a secret until his mother should recover.

The mother died and after that a sister, and still Walden and his wife, who today is a tall, handsome brunette, lived apart. Then Walden says he learned things which made him averse to acknowledging her as his wife and they continued to live apart. Not a time he contributed to her support. Then they lost track of each other.

Walden is fifty-four years of age, but looks ten or fifteen years younger. Years ago, he was a member of the famous live Oaks professional baseball champions of New England. He was signed as left fielder by the old Boston Nationals, but his father sent a deputy sheriff to the South End grounds one day and marched him back to Lynn.

ROSAMOND DIXEY STEERED.

Society People at Lenox Enjoy a 6-Mile Coast.

LENOX, Feb. 19.—For the first at Lenox a party of Boston and New York society people slid this afternoon six miles on a toboggan from Trinity Episcopal church in Lenox to St. Paul's Episcopal church in Stockbridge. Miss Rosamond Dixey of Boston steered the first toboggan, which went at times over fences buried in five feet of snow. The party included the estates of George H. Morgan, Charles Lanier, William D. Sloane, Samuel Fessenden, Mrs. George Westinghouse and Charles S. Mellen.

KILLS TWO IN SALOON.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—John C. Gargan, twenty-six years old, a bookkeeper employed by a South Brooklyn firm, shot and killed his brother, Harry J. Gargan, who had offices in Wall street and his brother-in-law, Martin W. Hynes, sixty years of age, of Lafayette avenue, in a saloon at the corner of Marcy and Lexington avenues, Brooklyn. The tragedy was the result of a family disagreement. Mr. Hynes on Friday night tried to induce his daughter, Mrs. Gargan, to leave her husband because he had been drinking heavily. While waiting for the police with his victims on the saloon floor, Gargan calmly smoked a cigarette.

Coulon Defeats Kendrick.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 19.—Johnny Coulon had no trouble in defending his title against Jem Kendrick the English bantam champion, when he won the decision without a dissenting opinion after a ten-round bout.

DOCTOR WHO CAUSED GIRL'S DEATH GETS FIFTEEN YEARS

Dr. E. P. Wing of Lynn Found Guilty in Case of Ethel Rogers of Milltown.

NEWBURYPORT, Feb. 19.—Dr. Edward P. Wing of Lynn, charged with causing the death of Miss Ethel Rogers of Milltown, Me., by an illegal operation, also charged with illegally treating Miss Mary A. Roberts of Worcester, was found guilty tonight by a jury in the Essex Superior Criminal Court and was immediately sentenced by Judge Raymond to not less than fifteen and not more than twenty years in State Prison. Dr. Wing collapsed and had to be assisted by court officers.

The same jury returned a verdict of disagreement in the case of Mrs. Jessie E. Farnham of Lynn, who was charged with being an accessory to these operations. Mrs. Farnham, who showed much relief when the disagreement verdict was pronounced, was held in $1,000 bail for further disposition. Whether she will be tried again is in the hands of District Attorney Peters.

Doctor Sixty Years of Age.

The case went to the jury at 4:20 p. m. The jury was out till 7:45. Judge Ray stood pat in the face of the lobby and even ing. He pronounced sentence on Dr. Wing immediately, as he leaves the circuit next week for a rest, on account of ill health and wished to complete the case.

Dr. Wing is sixty years old. He is a native of Canton, Me., and has practiced medicine in Lynn for twenty-five years. He is married and has been highly respected.

Last March Miss Rogers died in the Salem Hospital. She said Dr. Wing had given her illegal treatment. Dr. Wing when arrested, declared that the girl had been attacked by two men in Calais, Me. Her father was in Salem. The girl, in her terror, went to Salem and, with her father, appealed to Dr. Wing for relief. Dr. Wing said that he treated the girl out of common humanity.

Woman Patient a Witness.

Mrs. Farnham, who ran a lodging house in Lynn, was indicted as accessory. The double trial began last Wednesday. On the opening day the State sprung a surprise in a second indictment, in which Dr. Wing was also charged with illegal treatment of Miss Roberts. Miss Roberts, who had survived the operation, was the star witness for the state. She told a plain, unvarnished story that caused women spectators to leave the courtroom. This second indictment and Miss Roberts's testimony was very damaging to Dr. Wing's case.

LYNN FIANCEE WHO TURNED TABLES ON HER JOKING FRIENDS

HELEN L. OLESEN.

SHEPPARD WILL RACE.

Crack Runner Has Suspension Lifted Temporarily.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Mel Sheppard, the premier middle-distance runner of the world, still does not know whether he stands on the amateur ranks. At a special meeting of the National Military Athletic League Sheppard's case was only partially threshed out, and after five hours of wrangling the meeting adjourned subject to the call of the chairman. The council, however, lifted the suspension from Sheppard, so that he was able to run in the games of the Spanish war veterans Friday night, and he will be able to run at the Twenty-second Regiment games Wednesday. He will be allowed to run under protest, a greater number of supporters in the affirmative.

JOKE LICENSE LEADS TO WEDDING PLANS

Lynn Young Folks Turn Jest on Friends by Announcing Engagement.

LYNN, Feb. 19.—Miss Helen E. Olesen and Patrick Gibbons today turned a practical jest back upon its authors, when, following the announcement that a marriage license had been secured for them through misrepresentation at City Hall, they declared their engagement and will be married soon.

Miss Olesen lives at No. 94 Willow street and Mr. Gibbons at No. 8 Highland avenue. She is a popular, popular young woman and Mr. Gibbons, who is equally prominent, is a leader in the Father Mathew Total Abstinence Society of Lynn.

For more than a year Mr. Gibbons has been calling on Miss Olesen and when they were surprised when each received congratulations from friends over their approaching marriage.

"Why, we are going to marry," they said. "Oh, but you are. Didn't you just get a marriage license at City Hall?" was the rejoinder. The young man hastened to City Hall and found that mischievous friends had interfered. He sought Miss Olesen, and in a time they were both most angry. Then they laughed and decided to announce their engagement. She said: "At last I thought I'd get a pretty solitaire ring, but Mr. Gibbons and I have talked over and decided on a more sensible engagement. Here's a proof."

With that she displayed a fine solitaire set.

Since our friends are so anxious to see us wed, we will, said Mr. Gibbons. "We have set no date for the wedding as when that is fixed I'll get a real marriage license and invite the friendly inquiries."

THIEVES ESCAPE BULLETS.

Brokeman First Smashes Plate Glass to Give Alarm.

In scuttling a big plate glass window which he shattered with a long weight, Samuel Baverley saved money, diamonds and jewelry when two robbers, who entered man and a white man, entered the store at No. 209 Pleasant street last night at 10 o'clock. The crash of the glass scared the men, and Baverley followed them, firing a revolver, but they escaped, though pursued by a crowd. Saverley was alone in the store. The men entered and secured the door so that no one could enter. They compelled him to open his safe. Stooping behind the counter as though to secure something, Baverley picked up a weight and hurled it through the plate glass window. The stranger ran, Baverley, revolver in hand, followed. At the street door he fired at the fleeing men.

Lewis Fight a Draw

PARIS, Feb. 19.—The fight here tonight for the welterweight championship between Jack Lewis and Willie Lewis, both colored, was declared a draw in the twenty-fourth round. The referee was loudly hooted. Gunboat Smith, Harry Lewis and Ma Fox were in a box.

BOSTON ACTRESS CLAIMS ESTATE

Canastota they attempt to discredit my client. Otherwise it would not be necessary to talk about it. Mrs. Smith is of excellent reputation both here and there."

All They Want is Proof.

Dispatches from Canastota indicate that relatives and executors of Smith's estate do not look upon the claimant to the estate unkindly or consider her anything but the rightful owner of the money, if this would is to have it proved to them that Miss Most married Smith, so that they can legally have control of the fund they say they must have the proof.

A. N. Ellis of Canastota is one of the executors. "Most October" he said yesterday. "Miss Most informed me that she and Smith were married in Boston, March 7, 1905, by a justice of the peace. The laws of Massachusetts at that time allowed what were known as 'marriage shops,' but I am quite sure they have been closed. These offices were in charge of persons licensed to perform marriage ceremonies.

"Miss Most again about three weeks ago and I issued a public notice asking for information in regard to the alleged marriage and also asking for a notary public to act from Boston. There was no offer of a settlement, but I have since received word that they do not believe this matter will ever find its way into court.

Claude L. Forbes of Syracuse, attorney for the executors, was originally employed by Miss Most to show her marriage certificate. "I think I know pretty nearly what their case is," he said. "Smith went to Boston in Massachusetts in the year they allege, and no doubt a marriage took place. I will go there in a few days, and have investigated the case pretty thoroughly."

Jay C. Smith, father of Samuel C. Smith, survived his son by a few months and is administrator of the estate. He lives at Hemlock Lake, a few miles east of Canastota. "I don't know Miss Most, although for many years I lived but a few miles from her home," he said. "But that was twenty years ago, and, of course, she was only a little girl then. I can probably say but very little in regard to the case, as I am personally not interested in the property."

The marriage claim was a great surprise to me. Sam and I were pretty good chums, and it seems rather funny that he should not have told me about it if he had been married eight or ten years. "Sam was a good boy. His father was always his friend. He had no secrets. "Miss Most was on the stage once, but her father did not like it, so she quit. She is running her own farms near Canastota now and I guess is getting on very well off."

The estate came up for final settlement yesterday before Surrogate M. H. Kiley of Madison County, N. Y., according to a dispatch from there. Citation was issued, returnable later, for a final accounting.

NAME LIVING MEN IN BRIBERY PROBE

Allds Can No Longer Spare Anyone, It Is Declared by Those at Albany.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 19.—In the hope of upsetting a portion of the bribery story told by Senator Benn Conger, attorneys for Senator Allds, have decided to call George W. Dunn, former Republican State chairman, to testify before the Senate.

Colonel Dunn is the man to whom Conger swears the $7,500 corruption fund of 1902 was given as a campaign contribution to secure protection for the lobbie committee.

In all the cross examination of Conger, Allds legal defenders have been unable to force him to disgorge the name of any living man to whom a bribe was given. Dunn stands none as the man who can aid in refuting this charge against the living and the dead. Dunn's testimony may involve the credibility of Conger's whole story.

The fact that Allds' attorneys have decided to call Colonel Dunn to the stand is taken to mean that they will not be able to counter Conger's story would not seek to overthrow it if it would corroborate Conger.

The trial has come to a point now where Allds can no longer name any one. Allds also he must get the names of some living men.

B. & M. TRAINS LOOTED POLICE MAKE SIX IN ROUND-UP

Thousands of Dollars Lost in Robbery, Charge the Officers.

FIVE men and a woman were arrested by the police of the Dudley street station last night in a big round-up. Four of the men are charged with the larceny of freight from the Boston & Maine railroad. The other man and woman are alleged to have received the stolen property. All of the men are employed by the railroad.

It was the second roundup of alleged freight car thieves within a few months. Almost half of the police charged with larceny state out $4650 worth of merchandise. It is claimed, but the officials of the road believe they will be able to trace several big robberies to the scoundrels.

The arrests are the result of a three weeks' investigation of numerous robberies from freight cars at the North Station yards.

The first person gathered in by the police dragnet was Nathan A. Cohen, a freight conductor of No. 225 Dudley street. In his room was found merchandise which the police say was stolen from freight cars a few days ago.

Edgar W. Fielden of No. 53 Brookside avenue, Jamaica Plain, was also arrested. George H. Adams, Albert F. Caswell and Lewis Williams, all of Boston, and Mrs. Cohen's home at the time, were also placed in custody.

A few hours after the arrest of the men the police searched the home of Mrs. Fielden and placed Mrs. Clara Fielden, wife of Edgar W. Fielden under arrest. Mrs. Fielden is charged with receiving and concealing stolen property valued at $150. She was released on $500 bail, while the others were booked.

A. N. George, head of the Boston & Maine police, and Lieut. Daniel Driscoll, in charge of the investigation that led to the arrests, declare that the total value of the goods is several thousand dollars worth of merchandise, although considerable thefts have been made.

MILITIA PATROLS CAIRO.

Four companies of militia are patrolling the streets and Adjutant General Dickson is on the ground. Carlo Hayes, a white man, was shot and injured.

The coroner's jury met this afternoon to investigate the shooting of Henry Hunter. No effort was made to find out which one of the negro deputies had fired the shot that killed Hunter.

DOUBLE LEGAL STAMPS MORNINGS — DOUBLE LEGAL STAMPS MORNINGS

SAVINGS BANKS UNITED IN FIGHT ON LEGALIZING MELLEN'S MERGER BONDS

GOVERNOR DRAPER has got to fight the united banks of Massachusetts.

The banks do not want the bonds of the Boston Railroad Holding Company.

Morgan and Mellen want the money of the people, now in the savings banks, to use in their "development" of New England transportation. They are ready to help New Haven railroad interests with the money of New England savings banks.

The banks will march on the State House next month, and announce the triumph of investment committees—the Sunday American was informed last night on the highest authority, to tell the committees on Railroads and Banks and Banking, sitting jointly, that the Railroad Holding Company bonds ought to wait until they are good enough, automatically, to become legal investments without legislative sentiment.

What the banks will oppose is legislation proposed by the Governor in his inaugural message, and that the bonds will not become legal investments in Massachusetts savings banks without the stiff fight that spending the money of depositors will have to make, is the statement of a member of the executive board of the Massachusetts Banking Association.

The statement is the most important made for a newspaper since the triumphant of the merger battle, three years ago.

"Don't Want the Bonds."

"I am very glad," said the banker, "to let the public know that we are not care for the bonds that Mr. Mellen has to sell, and which Governor Draper offers to us.

"Whenever these bonds are the kind of bonds to which we can invest the money of the people of Massachusetts, no legislator will be necessary to put them into the banks. We have an excellent law that provides for a list of legal investments, and when the bonds of the Boston Railroad Holding Company reach that standard they will automatically become legal investments.

"Why ask the banks by legislation? Why not wait until there is no question about it?

"It is apparent that somebody wants to get these bonds in on us. It will be quite as apparent at the proper time that the savings banks do not care to purchase them. We shall make that apparent. I am convinced, in no uncertain way.

"The fact is, that this might be a bad precedent, and one that might come home to haunt some people. If they can make these bonds legal investments for savings banks this year, is it at all unlikely that some gentlemen of power and authority might come back another year, with the suggestion that copper stocks would be good investments for us?

Banks Practically Unanimous.

"I am well aware that one of the answers to these arguments will be that savings banks that don't want the Holding Company bonds will not be compelled to take them, but they ought not to be legal investments until their intrinsic stamped value which will make them legal investments automatically. We do not want to argue that there is a weaker brother among us, who might take unjustifiable investments, given the legal investment stamp of legislative authority.

"I think the public will find the banks of Massachusetts practically unanimous against the recommendation of the Governor.

"The situation seems to be that there is a lot of money in the Massachusetts savings banks and that somebody wants to get it out. The public need not be afraid. The bonds will not be heard from. The banks have not asked for the right to make these investments. The request, as you will observe, comes from the outside.

"Somebody wants to sell us something, and we have not proposed to buy.

"It seems to me that members of the Legislature ought to help us in every way possible to hold at a high mark the standard of the Massachusetts banks. Our law as to savings banks investments is the most conservative and the highest of any in the country. That an investment is good enough to be a legal investment for Massachusetts savings banks is the highest commendation in the financial world. We should keep that standard if it is possible to do so, and I don't know how that can be done by this proposition now under the practically unanimous opposition of the banks."

AMERICANS TO STOP NICARAGUAN WAR

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—It is believed the time has come for the United States to interfere in Nicaragua. The move has already been made by the American State Department. On March 15 John Barrett, now at the head of the Bureau of American Republics, and a commission representing the United States will go to Nicaragua to settle existing difficulties. The report will determine the future of the government of Nicaragua. It is believed the United States will eventually establish a government in Nicaragua similar to that maintained in Cuba.

Rear Admiral Kimball, in command of the fleet and the marines in the cruiser Denver, is watching the situation closely. He has the discretion of a naval officer to intervene whenever he sees fit, and the ex-President's exposition has been of advance to the republic. There has not been unanimous indorsement of Estrada, nor the Diaz-Chamorro party.

The acts of the government troops which have been disadvantageous to American residents have been repeated in the face of the warning from the American consular officers. These are the things in fruit that was expected and have proved that the Nicaraguans will not be able to give a guiding hand in order to put their government on a firm basis.

Enjoined Household Goods.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 19.—Joseph Ladouceur, respondent in a suit for divorce brought by his wife, was to-day enjoined from disposing of the household effects and was ordered to pay the costs in the case pending the settlement of the libel for divorce proceedings. The case was heard by Judge Arthur L. Brown of the Superior court in chambers.

BIG BONFIRES LIGHT FOR ICE CARNIVAL

While half a dozen great bon fires and hundreds of dainty Japanese lanterns illuminated the big skating rink, the music from six brass bond filled the frozen air at the Brookline Country Club last night, over 400 Boston and Brookline people entertained by an unusual variety of brilliance of costumes and number in attendance has not been equaled for some time.

During the early evening a dinner was served in the cozy rooms, after which all went either to the toboggan slide or the skating rink. The cold weather of the past few days put the ice-bed in fine shape and on the slide in the best of condition, and there was a great deal of fast skating. If the tee holds good, there will be another carnival at the club on Tuesday night.

The main feature was a curling match to decide the championship of Boston, the participants being the Boston and Brookline Curling clubs. A cup was given the winning team by the Massachusetts Curling Association. The lineup:

Brookline rink—Boston Curling Club (J. McGraw, captain; D. Smith, J. A. Teilgeuan, Sears, 16 points. Score, 11. H. Statt, captain; A. Bennett, Herbert Hayes, U. A. Felton, Sears, 25 points.

Second rink—Country Club (I. B. Jones, captain; Dr. Conway, F. S. Hall, H. Winderley). Score, 16 points. Boston Curling Club (G. B. Weyman, captain; C. Dutchers). Score, 9 points.

It was announced that the Country Club carried off the honors by 2 points up.

Spanish Veterans Puzzled.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Feb. 19.—The Spanish-American War veterans in this section are puzzled by the reply to their request through Congressman Bingham in regard to assisting and placing flags at half mast at the Navy Yard here on Feb. 15.

The directors of the City Trust Company are merged with those of the Old Colony and the officers of the two institutions are retained. The employes will be kept largely, the assignment to their new duties already having been made.

The directorial board of the new institution will be T. Jefferson Coolidge, Jr., who has been chairman of the executive committee of the Old Colony, will occupy the same title. Philip Stockton, president of the City Trust Company, becomes president of the new Old Colony. Mr. Coolidge, however, will retain the active management of the institution.

The commodious new home of the Old Colony Trust Company on Court street, which has just been finished, has been somewhat changed to accommodate the larger business of the consolidation. The City Trust Company gives up its quarters. The Temple place branch of the Old Colony will be continued as heretofore, but as the Massachusetts law allows only one branch to a trust company, the Bunker Hill branch of the City Trust Company will be taken over by the American Trust Company.

The six shareholders of the City Trust Company become stockholders of the combined company. The capital of the Old Colony has been increased to $2,500,000, and the stockholders of the City Trust will change their holdings for the new shares at the rate of five shares of City Trust stock for three shares of Old Colony.

The Old Colony has been paying dividends at the rate of 20 per cent, a year practically since its formation in 1890 and has accumulated an enormous surplus. The City Trust Company has also been very successful. The consolidation is made in the interest of economy. Both conduct practically the same kind of business, and it was felt that with a consolidation even better results could be accomplished at less expense.

WIFE SLAYER IN TERROR.

Shaking with remorse and terror, Edward J. Conroy, who on Friday night cut his wife to death in their East First street tenement, South Boston, sits wretchedly in his cell at Charles street Jail and awaits the ordeal of to-morrow when he will be arraigned on a charge of murder and compelled to listen to the frightful story of the crime that laid his faithful life companion low in death.

Nobody visited the wife slayer yesterday, and his friendlessness adds to his pitiable plight. He broke down completely

DIRECTING HEAD OF TRUST CO., IN FANCY DRESS COSTUME

T. JEFFERSON COOLIDGE, JR.

This is not Raisuli, the bandit, in evening regalia. It is T. Jefferson Coolidge, Jr., if you please, in fancy dress costume when he appeared on the amateur stage. He doesn't look like a great banker and promoter, but he quiet, your money is perfectly safe with him!

$65,000,000 CASH IN OLD COLONY TRUST

Merger Makes Institution the Biggest Outside New York and Chicago.

WITH the absorption of the City Trust Company, its largest rival in New England, the Old Colony Trust Company to-morrow begins business as the largest trust company in the country outside of New York and Chicago. Its deposits now exceed $65,000,000 and its surplus $12,000,000.

The merger, which was announced yesterday, makes the Old Colony the second largest banking institution in New England, being surpassed only by the National Shawmut Bank.

HOTEL WAITERS NEAR DEATH AS MAN BURNS $1,000

Epidemic of Heart Failure Clutches Touraine Dining Room as Bills Vanish.

A GOOD many people with "money to burn" have been guests at the Hotel Touraine since it threw its portals open, but none attracted more interest or cause so nearly causing the death of several waiters as a well-dressed young chap who last night burned several $500 bills in the restaurant.

With him was another man of the same age, perhaps twenty-eight years. They were evidently well supplied with money and they also did not let the least item of expense in their dinner. Round about them was the usual crowd, perhaps thirty or forty men and women at dinner.

"Fives now a $500 bill?" one of the two asked the waiter when he presented the check. Then the diner peeled a yellow-backed goodly certificate from a thick roll. Folding it double he asked the waiter to touch a match to the corner.

The waiter turned pale and looked around for the house detective. Evidently Harry Thaw must have escaped from Matteawan and was in the Touraine.

"Oh, well, give me the match," said the diner. He lit it quickly and touched it to the bill. The waiter dropped his towel and gasped.

"Whuff, poof, sis, whoof!" Up went the bill straight to the ceiling, glowed for a moment into a beautiful green, and left a speck of ashes, not a fragment, was left.

The crowd of light started general admiration in the already brilliantly illuminated room, and several other waiters rushed over, some afraid of the evidently fearing a fire.

"Like it?" asked the man, who seemed to take intense delight in the sensation he was creating.

"Want to see me burn another?" A second time he unrolled a brand new bill with the awe-inspiring characters of 500 in the upper corners. Again the third was burned. Several more followed.

The proprietor of the hotel was in a far way towards having several suddenly deceased waiters, victims of heart failure, on his hands when the fabulous diner admitted that it was all a trick, that the "money" was only a cleverly-prepared chemical imitation of the real thing. It vanished well however, and several dinners were cold before the excitement subsided.

VREELAND MAY LEAD.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Representative Edward B. Vreeland of Salamanca, N. Y., is being urged for chairman of the Republican State Committee, to succeed Timothy L. Woodruff. Mr. Vreeland could have had the position had he desired it when Governor Higgins was a close candidate. Benjamin B. Odell was a visitor at the capital to-day, and a number of the New York Congressional delegation. The talk of Mr. Vreeland for chairman of the State Committee followed the visit of the former Governor and State leader. Mr. Vreeland is a banker and is prominent in New York State politics.

Salem Is in $480 By a Rigid Reform! Fudge on the $6.74!

At the Rate Mayor Howard Is Going There's Hope for the National Debt.

SALEM, Feb. 19.—Mayor Arthur Howard's refusal to sign a special warrant by which the city would save $6.74 under a special two per cent. discount on two carloads of sewer pipe has aroused a storm of protest from his opponents, but the Mayor, in an interview to-night with the Sunday American defended his course and declared that during the first month of his administration he has saved the city $490 as compared with the corresponding month of Mayor Hurley's last administration.

Opponents of Mayor Howard say he has forsworn all special warrants since his failure to get one for his January salary in advance, which salary was later attached by his landlady.

Disposing of his charge with one of his characteristic laughs Mayor Howard said: "There will be no feasts at the Salem Club, no dinners at the Colonial House, no carriage hire for Aldermen and other city officials and no payment for private telephone bills from the public treasury sheet, during my administration, but there will be a strict administration of the laws along what I believe is my sound line of duty."

BEEF TRUST WORRIED.

Wires Kept Hot in Quest of News of Indictments.

CHICAGO, Feb. 19.—Chicago packers kept the wires hot between here and New York to-day in an effort to learn whether they had really been indicted by the Grand Jury of New York County, New Jersey reported. Late in the afternoon Henry Veeder, general counsel for the Swift interests, said he had received information that the Grand Jury under the direction of the National Packing Company had been voted. An official of the National Packing Company made the same report. A telephone message denying the published statements that an indictment for conspiracy had already been voted was received at the Chicago office of the company from Kenneth K. McLaren, a director of the corporation, who resides at Jersey City. Mr. McLaren was the only member of the board who, according to report, escaped indictment.

DYING, SAILS FOR HOME.

Man with Broken Back Struggles to See Native Land.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—James Chonlos, who is making a brave effort to get to his home before death overtakes him in spite of the fact that his back is broken, left for Greece to-day on the steamship Martha Washington, of the Austro-Americ line. He was placed in the cabin quarters of the ship and will remain there until the ship reaches Trieste where he will disembark. The man hit by a railroad train in Kansas City. He seemed to suffer but one thing and that was to see his native land before he died. He declares that despite his pain for he was at last actually on the voyage that was to end at his home.

'AL' BEMIS BOLTS IN SEE-LECTMAN FIGHT

News Spreads to Gay Head That Councillor Is Now a Bold Insurgent.

Alden F. Bemis of Brookline, described by Representative "Jim" Mellen the other day as "closer to Eben D. Draper than Draper's undershirt," has bolted a Republican caucus.

Bemis! A bolter! What IS the Grand Old Party a-coming to when Alden Bemis bolts? That's what they'll want to know to-day in Wenham, in Florida (Berkshire County), in Agawam and Carver and Gay Head. It's a sad case.

Alden F. Bemis has meant so much to the Republican party in Massachusetts for a dozen years that Henry Cabot Lodge never thought of hiking out of Washington, or Tuckernuck until he had made positive sure that "Al" Bemis was to home and on the job. Alden Bemis has been all of that and more. His presence in any Republican gathering has meant solidity, earnestness, stand pat, a platform and devotion.

"Old Homestead" Councillor.

Mr. Bemis wears a make-up suggesting "Den" Thompson. When Governor Draper wanted to put the boots on a suburban houses-for-the-people proposition, last Fall, he named Bemis for the Homestead Commission. The commission has been known ever since as the "Old" Homestead Commission.

For three years Mr. Bemis has been a member of the Governor's council, the highest office in Massachusetts next to Governor, lieutenant-governor and councillors, and one of these—one of the eight—has bolted a Republican caucus!

The Governor's council is the one body right that it was "most deplorable" that it could not be represented to a finish in the Brookline Republican caucus, and that it could not be known as accident; but Mr. Bemis got his, and got it good; and if Governor Eddie Bates is a good guesser he is going to take it in the past, he is running on nomination papers.

Would Be a See-lectman.

On nomination papers. "Rep., Ind., Nom. Pap.", after two years in the House of Representatives, two in the Senate and three years on the Governor's council.

If there isn't crape on the door of the Republican State Committee to-morrow, if Henry Cabot Lodge isn't denying himself to callers, if the Legislature sits, gosh! if somebody don't turn off the sun, the Republican party has done lost up and no mistake.

And all he wanted was a place on the Board of See-lectment!

CASTRO IS BUSY AGAIN.

New Plot Discovered Against Venezuela Government.

CARACAS, Venezuela, Feb. 19.—The discovery of a new plot against the government and in the interest of former President Castro, has caused a sensation. Several of the most prominent persons have been made. Disquieting rumors regarding the political situation are current and Manuel Hernandez, leader of the National party and formerly minister at Washington, who is now in Paris, have alarmed his partisans here.

MOB VIOLENCE IN TROLLEY CAR STRIKE

Philadelphia Traffic Tied Up When Union Suddenly Orders a Walkout.

playing a Keystone Union button. John Hacket, thirty-eight years old, of Forty-eight street, near Dauphin, was locked up at the Central station overnight on the charge of being drunk and disorderly and carrying a revolver.

About 7 o'clock this evening a mob of men and boys stoned a Tenth and Jackson street car, running north, in Eleventh street, at Snyder avenue.

There were about a dozen passengers in the car, some of whom were hit by flying missiles, which broke the windows.

Police Taken Unawares.

Police officials were caught unawares. It was not until several hours after the issuance of the strike order that Director of Public Safety Clay knew of it. Then there was a wild series of conferences in City Hall after which police were sent to the various barns of the companies, and, where it was deemed advisable, were placed on the front platform of cars, with the motormen.

Union leaders to-night said that more than 6,000 men, most of them members of their organization, had obeyed the order to strike. The number who had gone out was estimated by the company at 2,500. The real showdown of the strength of both the company and the union will come Monday, at the beginning of the week's heavy business. The company is positive of its ability to run its cars. The union insists that the tie-up will be complete.

The company made efforts to run cars to-night in Chestnut street, Thirteenth and Fifteenth streets, the Chestnut Hill line, Strawberry Mansion and the Allegheny avenue. All other lines were idle after nightfall.

Union Meetings at Barns.

Union men held meetings near the different barns to-night and were addressed by C. O. Pratt, national organizer of the union, who led them in the strike last June; John J. Murphy, president of the Central Labor Union, and other men prominent in the ranks of labor in this city.

Support was promised to the car men by Charles B. Gilday, national organizer of the United Mine Workers of America, in a long-distance telephone message this afternoon. The mine workers, he said, stood ready to give moral and financial support to the strikers.

The officers of the union charge that the Rapid Transit Company precipitated the strike, which is the culmination of a dispute over the union recognition which has been on between the company and men for over a month. The union and the company have been locked over the question of the recognition of the union, but the order issued to-day by the executive committee says that the men will stay out until their organization is recognized and will not return to work except on a basis of twenty-five cents an hour. The strike was ordered at 10 o'clock this morning and followed almost immediately the discharge of 125 men by the company officers this morning, "for the good of the service."

MELLEN DIDN'T BUY PITTSFIELD ROAD; 'TWAS STORRS

Senator Turtle Says So, and You Can Take It All Right From Turtle.

THE Pittsfield street railway has NOT been sold to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company. The report to that effect, spread broadcast through the State the other day, was slanderous, not to say villainous. The law provides that no railroad corporation shall directly or indirectly control the stock of a street railway company. Besides, the New Haven has been ordered by the courts to get out of the trolley business.

State Senator William Turtle of Pittsfield, long-time counsel for the street railway company at home, tells the American there is nothing in the story that the New Haven is the purchaser. Inasmuch as Senator Turtle is chairman of the committee on railroads at the State House, he would be mighty apt to scent the New Haven if that corporation were in the deal. Senator Turtle handled the sale for his clients.

"The Pittsfield trolley deal," Senator Turtle says, "was sold to Mr. Storrs. Mr. Storrs appeared as the individual purchaser, but I believe—in fact I know—that he bought for the New England Investment & Security Company."

For the purpose of identifying Mr. Storrs we turn to "Who's Who in New England," page 936:

STORRS, Lucius Seymour, elec. ry. official; born Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 4, 1869; son O. S. S.; B. Sc. Univ. of Neb., 1890 (M. A. 1904). Held technical positions with Northern Pacific Ry., N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. and Colo. Fuel & Iron Co.; v.p. New England Investment and Security Co. (the co. holding elec. rys. acquired by N. Y., N. H. & H. St. Ry.); pres. Springfield St. Ry., Berkshire St. Ry., etc. Mem. Am. Inst. Mining Engrs, A. A. A. S., Am. Soc. Testing Metals, Sigma Chi, Sigma Xi. Residence, 148 Mill St. Office, Mass. Mut. Bldg., Springfield, Mass.

"The New Haven has absolutely nothing to do with the Pittsfield purchase," Senator Turtle says.

IN ROW OVER GIRL, QUITS.

New Haven Police Commissioner Resigns After Fight.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Feb. 19.—Police Commissioner Arthur N. Dean today tendered in his resignation to Mayor H. Bliss, who had started an investigation into a mysterious attack upon a young woman in State street. Michael Leahy, a brother of Tomas Leahy, the old St. Louis and Washington catcher, says that he heard a woman's screams, and found her struggling to free herself from the clutches of Dean. Leahy says Dehn cursed him and took him to the Central police precinct, declaring him to be under arrest. Dean said that he had just rescued the girl from the embrace of a man whom Leahy let escape him. His resignation was accepted.

PEARL MITIVIER

LIGHT IN WINDOW FOR "LOST" FATHER

Papa, don't you all love papa. He was good and kind and we don't know why he went away. I am afraid he got hurt. If he is all right I want you to put this and get him to come back to us. We keep a light burning every night until late so that he will know we love him and are expecting him home. Please find our papa.

PEARL MITIVIER.

Pearl is her brave little self now for the family. child keeps house for the baling mother when the latter is away from home. The child still manages to go to school.

DOWN AND OUT AT 55, THIS DRINK VICTIM WILL TRY AGAIN

Washington Street Merchant Who Squandered Fortune Vagrant at State Farm.

WHEN you are fifty-five, is it too late to begin all over again? Can you change your habits then? What chance have you got in life, anyway, if you are fifty-five, "broke," a slave to drink, and all you have left are remorse and good intentions?

John R. Carberry of Roxbury—fortune gone, friends gone, home gone—proved from distinguishing answers to these questions at the State farm at Bridgewater. Carberry, for years a prosperous hardware merchant in Washington street, is a vagrant in the eyes of the law to-day. He went "the pace that kills" for ten years and now he is "down and out."

He wants to try again. He knows the chances are against success. But his intentions are good and he will make just one more struggle to stand on his feet. He is beginning late. But, then, he began late to go down hill to where he is now, and he is going to try to get up before he started down, the rewards of success.

Was Late Whooping It Up.

Carberry hasn't the usual excuse of youthful indiscretion" to square him with God and mankind. He was a steady drinker when he was forty-five. His father had warned him against drink, both by his own example and sincere, earnest, fatherly advice. With this advice, his father gave him a small fortune. Carberry established a flourishing business and prospered. Then the day came when he thought he was strong enough to "drink moderately." It cost him the highest price a man can pay and discover that he thought wrong.

"My father was a heavy drinker and it nearly killed him," said Carberry when he was bed, weak and emaciated, convalescing and bowed with shame from judge Waterworth's City Police Court, to go to the State Farm upon his own appeal.

"On his deathbed, when I was but twenty, he took me by the hand and said to me: 'For twenty-five years I followed his advice. And I am now FIFTY. I think of it, I was forty-five—think of it, forty-five—I took my first drink.

What the First Drink Did.

"I had a good business, had $15,000 cash in the bank, had a good wife, a fine happy home, had good health and the ambition of a youth. I was looked up to by those who knew me. I had hundreds of friends. I had no enemies. I have no business, no money, no home, no wife, no health, no ambition, no friends. That is what my first drink did for me.

"Why did I take my FIRST drink did it? Because it is the first one that always runs in. Carberry is not a drunkard, not particularly a man with habits formed and with a craving for liquor. I could take the FIRST drink if it could see clearly what the LAST drink was going to do and how blind I was. Never, perhaps, does drink don't seem to reason that way. They are blinded.

"Sounds funny, doesn't it? Every man and woman who drinks has discovered this—knows that alcohol is bad, that the temptation will come, that the first drink once began; that it means just the destruction that has come to me. I am simply nothing 'smart' about it; that there isn't one, single, solitary good thing about it. And yet we deliberately, and with our eyes open, go ahead and drink.

Where the Error Lurks.

"I'll tell you what it is. Each of us thinks HE is different from all the rest. We are conceited, egotistic, hopelessly insane on the subject of what WE can do. The other fellow always goes to hell. But WE think that WE can't and won't. We think there is something different in us from all the rest of the people in the world. And, with all our supposed gifts of reasoning, we look at the future more than one step at a time.

"Physically every one of us. We take a drink. We know that it will be exhilarating. Why can't we look just a step further and see that it will make us dizzy, disgusting, irresponsible, a shame to our friends and to ourselves? Why can't we look a step further than that and see that it will lose our work, if we are steady, and our business, if we have money?

"We know we wouldn't hire a drunken man. Why don't we stop to think that a man wouldn't hire us if we grew drunk? Why can't we see that, just as sure as death we will land where the others have landed for hundreds and hundreds of years before and are landing by hundreds around about us?

"Moderate drinking possible? Nonsense. There is no such thing as moderate drinking. You'll be drunk, because every fool knows that alcohol will make one human being drunk every time. And one drunk will be followed by another. And each one will be worse than the one before it.

The Folly of Being a "Sport."

"Well, I'll stop dreaming and tell you my story. My father, dying, told me that he had been a heavy drinker and that it had killed him. He told me there was nothing in it—absolutely nothing. He proved it.

"He left me some money and I did well. His dying words rang in my ears and I had no use whatever for drink. But I had friends who drank, and one day at a banquet, they passed the champagne and somebody remarked: 'Why, he an ass, John? Brace up and be a sport. Take on one and be one of us.' They were all jolly and seemed to be having the time of their lives. Besides their jest stung me somehow.

"Well, I took around me now and there isn't one of them living now who amounts to a row of pins. Most of them are dead. It killed them, too.

"That wine did have an exhilarating effect. I was soon one of the merriest in the bunch. I didn't get drunk, somehow. So I became convinced that I could be a moderate drinker and get away with it.

Bad Luck Broke Me.

"But after while I did get drunk. When I would do this, my judgment seemed to go wrong. I would be all right the next day, but somehow I would have the same judgment as I did before I drank. I couldn't quite bring myself to believe, then, I invested I usually made a mistake, where previously I had always invested wisely. I hid it all to bad luck. Fooled again. Bad luck, I was telling. It was booze—just plain booze. That's the worst of it; it robs you of your judgment. And what is worse, you don't know it. You are losing your judgment. It's about only thing that can be stolen from you without your ever knowing it.

"Then I got bitten by the bug of places in the stock market. I took to the bucket shops, and for three months I made money me good and proper. Then I drank to stupefy my brain, that I would get out the loss.

"Naturally I didn't have so much time for business, trying to drink all night and speculate all day. So I began to lose money.

"My cash in bank was all gone then, and I sold the store two years ago. I was going to invest that money in something profitable, and try over again. Instead I invested it in drink. Profitable investment, wasn't it? I'm down and out both—that's the dividend.

"I tried to brace up. I had myself sent to the State farm. But nothing did any good. First I would drink for pleasure, then for remorse. I'd always have some sort of a reason to drink. I'd drink to square myself with what mind and conscience I had left. Finally I could quit at all.

"Friends? Not a soul have I got. And I never did anybody but myself any harm. Now, I think of it, real friends in Norwood and Walpole used to caution me that I was drinking too hard. But I laughed at THEM. Called them a set of dead ones—grouches.

I wanted the "good fellows." They were always around me, when I had some money. Some of them spent freely, too. But I did the most of it. Now, I remember it, none of these fellows stuck to me when I was broke. When I had no money in my pocket, I was always alone.

"When I finally got 'clean broke' I tried to reform, but no use. I was ashamed to go near my old home at Norwood. I changed my name to John Cowes. I had no opportunity to do anything for myself My friends deserted me. They saw my seedy clothes and turned their heads when I passed. Some of them even said once other what a fool I was for squandering my money—the money I had squandered on them. My wife left me. She knew I was a "bum."

"That was the worst blow of all. I could get no money, even for food, from my former friends, and I could get no honest employment. I had to do chores here and there to get a little money, and then I would spend that for drink. The end finally got to know me. They synthesized with me, but had to arrest me now and then. I would be placed on probation and would try hard to do better, but it was no use.

"Now, I'm going to try once more. Do you think I've got a chance—just one hope?"

Probation Officer Wilkinson said that he and others would give Carberry all the help they could. They verified his story and "just weak, doesn't seem to have much of a mind of his own," was the reason Wilkinson gave for the downfall of John R. Carberry.

BRIDE WHO WILL HAVE HONEYMOON ON WESTERN RANCH

MRS. GORDON McKAY

MISS MITCHELL NOW MRS. VICTOR M'KAY

Lawrence Girl Becomes Bride at a Quiet Ceremony in Trinity Church.

MR. and Mrs. Marion Victor McKay, the former the son of the late Gordon McKay, who were married yesterday noon in Trinity Church by the Rev. Alexander Mann, are now on the fast Chicago express en route for their ranch in Montana, where the honeymoon is to be spent. The bridal pair left at 1:30 p. m. yesterday and are due in Chicago this afternoon.

The wedding was a very quiet affair. The bride, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Mitchell of Lawrence, was given in marriage by her father. Her mother was unable to be present. The groom's best man was Robert Gordon McKay, former Harvard varsity tackle, and brother of the bridegroom, was the only other attendant. The bride wore a tailored travelling gown, with hat to match.

Much Talked-of Romance.

The wedding was the result of a much talked of romance. McKay met his bride shortly after graduating from Phillips Andover and graduated from the Lawrence High School and later attended a Boston finishing school. The marriage license was taken out three weeks ago and since that time they have been busy receiving congratulations.

They plan to spend some time in the west where the young bridegroom has business interests.

When Marion Victor McKay married a girl in moderate circumstances he did it in some respects just what his father did when he married Miss Annie Carter, a poor Pittsfield man, a machinist on the Boston & Lowell railroad, when he was an apprentice for sewing, heeling and finishing shoes devised by L. B. Blake of Abington. Hand-sewed shoes became the rage and McKay became rich. His first wife died and he met and married Minnie Treat, his housekeeper's daughter at Cambridge.

$100,000 Divorce Gift.

She was a beautiful young woman, but only half the age of her husband. There was a remarkable romance, too, in their courtship. He invested in the corporation and even made his parting wife a present of $100,000. She was a reigning beauty in Boston, Washington and Newport then. The most exclusive court circles welcomed her, even the King and the Crown Prince of Sweden opening their doors to her and paying her particular personal homage.

The divorce papers were sealed and the reason was never made public.

Mrs. McKay took for a second husband Count von Brunck, military attaché of the German embassy at Washington and when they were accompanied him on all diplomatic missions. The Kaiser took you Brunck from his post later, and his fair American wife's importunities, restored him to favor.

REAL ESTATE MAN SUED.

Wife of Wealthy New Yorker Complains of Intemperance.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—John M. Thompson, President of the John M. Thompson Co., on 32d Broadway, has been named the defendant in a suit for separation brought by his wife Sarah G. Thompson, one of the best known real estate men in the city. He was formerly president of the New York Life Insurance Company.

His wife declares he has become of at least $15,000, in addition to a $250 monthly salary from the estate over which he is executor. They were married on March 7, 1890, in Nashville, Tenn., where the bride was prominent in society. Mrs. Thompson asserts that her husband broke the agreement, intemperate habits and loose morals have made married life unbearable. In her petition by saying that her extravagance has been a chief bone of contention in their household.

AFTER ROCK ISLAND?

Sir Edgar Speyer Believed to Represent British Capital.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Much mystery surrounds the visit to this country of Sir Edgar Speyer, brother of James Speyer, the head of the big banking house of that surname in Pine street. Quite secretly, however, combined with the fact that Sir Edgar spent much time to-day at his brother's banking house, and there met prominent representatives of many banking and railroad interests, led to rumors that Sir Edgar had been commissioned by large English interests to make an investigation of Rock Island properties and possibilities, with a view to taking over the holdings of the Pierson syndicate.

TIME LOCK A WATCHMAN.

New Invention Makes Record of Everything.

When the man assigned to open a store fails to get around on time the fact will be automatically recorded by a new invention which has been put on the market by the Triplex Guardent Time Lock company of No. 74 Cortlandt street, New York. The device is being introduced in the city. Its latest lock is attached to doors and keeps a weekly time sheet of every time the door is locked or unlocked. It is designed principally to protect business men against cases of time in opening and closing their establishments and to protect employes against unauthorized persons entering their place by the use of unknown duplicate keys. The lock cannot be picked without a record being made.

UNIONS AROUSED BY JUDGE'S CHARGE

Resent Statement Regarding Apprentice System; Lay Blame on Bosses.

Organized labor, at a meeting of the Central Labor Union to-day, will take action to defend itself against the charge made by Judge Walt in the Superior Criminal Court that labor unions are in part responsible for conditions that make youth criminally idle.

Conservative labor men are aroused at the charge and call the criticism of them and their system gratuitous.

Bitterness is added to their feelings by the concluding part of the judge's statement when he refused to be lenient with five boys who had been brought before him. He thought they would have a better chance to learn a trade in prison than they would have if he allowed them to go free, because there were no labor unions or apprentice systems in prisons to check them in their desire to learn how to earn a living.

Here are the views of some of the better known labor leaders and officials:

John E. Foss, business agent of Carpenters' Union, No. 33: "The statement is an absolute falsehood, so far as the Carpenters' Union is concerned."

Michael A. Murphy, president of the Boston Central Labor Union:

"It is extremely fortunate that the trade unions never organized the bank cashiers and town treasurers, or Judge Walt would be ready to invoke trade unionism responsible for every theft committed on the part of the police. The trade unions, and not the unions, are responsible for this condition."

Albert E. Locke, secretary of the Boilers and Portable Engineers' Union, No. 4: "Judge Walt's knowledge of trade unionism appears to be as rusty as his knowledge on Massachusetts statute law on the matter, so far as my trade is affected by his unwarranted criticism."

John C. MacDonald, business agent of the Elevators' Constructors' Union: "Judge Walt doesn't know what he is talking about, as regards our craft, at least. For us to have an apprentice learning while there is not a single journeyman out trade in Boston to-day, because of the lack of apprenticeship for that fact. They say that apprentices don't pay."

Arthur M. Huddell, business agent of the building trades department of the Boston Central Labor Union: "Judge Walt is fifty years behind the times. Under modern industrial conditions the highly skilled specialist has taken the place formerly occupied by the man who had a trade. The system, not the union, is responsible for the disappearance of apprentices."

John H. Wilson, secretary of Machinists' Union, No. 264: "The statement contained in Judge Walt shows an utter lack of knowledge concerning industrial conditions. Our union has always had apprentices to one hundred journeymen. There are not to my knowledge a dozen in Greater Boston to-day to every 100 men in our trade."

SOLONS IN COLD STORAGE.

Committee on Tour Then Samples Goods at Feast.

The directors of the Quincy Market Cold Storage and Warehouse Company have been entertaining the members of the Legislature's committee on Public Health, which has before it an anti-oleomargarine bill introduced by Representative Francis B. Crowninshield of Boston. The bill, which is one of eight members of the committee of which Joseph Walker of Gloucester is chairman last Wednesday is considered similar to the Massachusetts law in force, but it often take to "the sense of the senate."

The committee has assembled Marsh & Co.'s public hearing on the bill. After the meeting the members of the committee dined as guests of the company in the Exchange club on meats and vegetables which, it is rumored in the warehouse, goodness knows when.

PLEA FOR STAGE CHILD.

Noted Actors Will Speak at Free Meeting Tonight.

With Francis Wilson coming on especially from New York and J. E. Dodson remaining over in Boston on purpose to be the star speakers at a free meeting in the Hollis Theatre to-night in favor of the legislative bill permitting children to participate in stage entertainments under personal supervision, the movement for the same treatment of this interesting problem will receive considerable impetus. The meeting will be presided over by the Rev. G. L. Perin of the Beacon street Universalist Church, Brookline. Mr. Perin is also president of the Franklin Square House Association.

DID RUSSELL WILL GIVE DANIEL HALF?

Perplexing Problem Raised Now About Two Seemingly Conflicting Provisions.

By a puzzling paragraph in the will of Daniel Russell, the North Dakota rancher, who claims he is Daniel Blake Russell, may be prevented from obtaining a claim to the estate, even though he shows conclusively that he is the long-lost heir. This paragraph, it is contended, contradicts a previous provision, which states that William C. Russell shall share equally with his brother Daniel.

It is claimed that the wording of the first paragraph, which reads, "William will share equally and justly whatever of his estate he may hold when Daniel returns," does not indicate that William was obliged to hold or keep any of said estate until Daniel should return, but that he had the absolute right to dispose of the whole or any part in the meantime.

On these two paragraphs will come the real fight in the Russell case, as the presiding hearing is said to be merely a skirmish to establish the identity of the claimant.

Residue Goes to William.

The second paragraph reads—"All the rest residue of my real and personal estate I bequeath and devise equally to my wife, Mary L., and to my son, William C. Russell, I will give and devise all my said estate to either, should only one survive my death."

The will was executed in 1898. His wife died in 1899 and the testator in January, 1907, leaving his son William C. Russell surviving and entitled to the whole residue of the estate, if some lawyers.

The paragraph giving the residue of the estate to William C. Russell is separated from that referring to Daniel Blake Russell, the claim of $8,400,000 turned on the paragraphing of a will a few years ago, in the Swearingen case.

The inventory of the estate shows that Russell left real estate valued at $201,600, of which the business block at No. 128 Fremont street, is valued at $258,000.

Intricate Legal Problem.

"It is difficult to see" said a leading legal authority yesterday, "how it can be claimed that there is any property held to be held by William C. Russell in trust to await the return of Daniel Blake Russell. If there is no such a trust, what is the purpose of the present proceedings in the case on trial? Is it said to be to establish the fact that the claimant or claimants is the real Daniel Blake Russell, the son of the testator, who left home a dozen or twelve years before he made. But suppose this claimant should prove that he is such a person, what will it avail him if there is nothing held in trust for him? There is nothing for him to get. The most he can get is the right to raise the legal question as to whether or not William C. Russell will sell that which on the property given to William C. Russell."

ANTI-LOBBY REPORT DUE.

Legislature's Sub-Committee Expected to Produce Bill.

Persons interested in the suppression of the State House lobby are wondering just what sort of an anti-lobby bill will be brought forth by the sub-committee appointed to draft one for the full Joint Judiciary Committee of the Legislature. The sub-committee is expected to report this week.

Two anti lobby bills were presented to the House yesterday, one by Representative Norman H. White of Brookline, the other by Senator Arthur L. Nason of Haverhill.

The sub-committee includes Senator Mulligan of Natick, and Representatives Saunders of Clinton and Turner of Walpole. Senator Nason is chairman of the lobby bill. Attorney Fairbairn of the ex-Senator, Lawyer Fairbairn is chairman of the lobby bill. Norman White's bill would put a ban on his lobby practice.

PLAN FREE DENTAL WORK.

Cambridge Doctors Urge Action by Officials.

Cambridge school children are to have their teeth taken care of free of charge if the plan of Dr. R. S. Andrews and Dr. F. O. Klusman are approved by Superintendent of Schools Parlin and the Board of Health. It is planned to open offices for school dentistry in each of the school buildings and all of the 12 two Cambridge doctors have petitioned the school board.

SHERIFF BARNES' RECOVERY.

Three Doctors Failed.

Peruna's Work in this Desperate Case the Talk of the County.

Court-House, Warren County, Tennessee.

Relieved of Throat Trouble by Pe-ru-na.

Mr. R. W. D. Barnes, sheriff of Warren County, Tennessee, in a letter from McMinnville, Tenn., writes: "I had throat trouble and had three doctors treating me. All failed to do me any good, and pronounced my health gone.

"I concluded to try Peruna, and after using four bottles can say I was entirely cured. That was three years ago. I am now well and sheriff of this county, able to ride all the time, thanks to you, gentleman."

Catarrh of Throat.

Mr. C. H. Happy, Hoyt, Ray Co., Mo., writes: "I can safely recommend Peruna as a remedy that will cure all catarrhal troubles.

"It was of great benefit to me, as it cured me of catarrh of the throat, and I took a very bad cold and had la grippe last February. It settled in my throat and lungs. I took three bottles of Peruna and it cured me.

"I highly recommend it to all who are sick, and I am glad to add my endorsement to that of others."

Head, Throat, Stomach.

Mrs. George J. Neumeyer, 426 N. Water St., Menasha, Wisconsin, writes: "I am entirely well now of catarrh of the head, throat and stomach. I feel as though I had never had catarrh. I will recommend Peruna to all who are sick or ill, for I find nothing better than Peruna."

A Severe Cough.

Mr. E. A. Stahl, Stahl's Farm, Fayne, Ohio, writes: "I thank you a thousand times for Peruna and I think every family ought to keep it in the house, and it would save doctor bills. I will do all I can for you.

"I had a cough this winter for six weeks and I took three bottles of Peruna and it stopped the cough and I am well."

Chronic Nasal Catarrh.

Mr. Charles H. Stevens, 123 14th St., Detroit, Mich., writes: "It affords me great pleasure to testify to the merits of Peruna as a remedy for catarrh.

"I suffered for some time with chronic nasal catarrh, but after five months' treatment, during which time I used seven bottles of Peruna, I am pleased to say that I am entirely well, there not being the slightest trace of catarrh left."

FREIGHT CONDITIONS CONDEMNED BY KNAPP

Present State of Affairs Almost Intolerable, the Commissioner Declares.

Rate from Liverpool to Chicago and Ohio to Chicago Is the Same.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 19.—"The conditions attending railway transportation in the United States are most intolerable," declared Chairman Mann, of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, in the course of a hearing on the Townsend railroad bill today. Chairman Knapp of the Interstate Commerce Commission appeared.

"I think this new," he answered, when Chairman Mann asked if he would give the railroads the right to make any agreements they desired without the Interstate Commerce Commission. He would give the railroads the right to make different rates in favor of sundry ports so that the domestic rate would be greater than the foreign rate through sundry ports.

"Why is it that the rate on pottery from Liverpool, England, to Chicago, is exactly the same as the rate on pottery from Liverpool, O., to Chicago," asked Kennedy, of Ohio, "and that as the pottery sent for export from the domestic port is unloaded while the import rate remains unloaded? Why is it that the railroads have adopted for the foreign goods in favor of the domestic product?"

"I don't answer that they were compelled to take to get the business," replied Chairman Knapp.

Mr. Knapp recommended to the committee the passage of the bill introduced by Representative Sherman, Minnesota, declared that the most vital thing in any of this agreement was that "the railroads should be required to file their agreements immediately."

"MOTION" TALK IS LATEST.

Women Would Cultivate Art by Poetic Dancing.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Can you imagine yourself understood without speaking? Here you good "motion" talkers! Can you tell what a friend really means by the way he moves his arms or puts his head?

These are only three of a number of pertinent questions inspired by the talk of Miss Ruth St. Denis of Troy, who appeared this afternoon at Mendelssohn Hall in a presentation of Delsarte dancing.

Say, "Good motion habits," she said, "are the foundation of all the arts. The greatest American artists were the greatest motion artists. With her success is not at all limited to a knowledge of Delsarte, Miss St. Denis has made a study of the principles of herself to soon to be her pathfinder through the art of poetic dancing. Miss Ruth Denis is her name, and Delsarte is her guide.

MEAT BOYCOTT LOSES.

Deputies Decide Fight on Prices Can't Win.

The boycott on meat has been ineffective and will no longer affect the lowering of the price of foodstuffs, in the opinion of the members of the York street Club, who discussed the subject last night.

The question selected for a debate was Resolved, "That the present boycott, if sustained, will permanently lower the prices of foodstuffs." Affirmative side: Thomas Hall, Jr., and Thomas Hall. Negative side: George Hall and Thomas Hall. Judges selected by Fred H. King and James F. Hall.

Watching a Stomach Digest Food

Was the Means Whereby Science Made Possible the Cure of Dyspepsia.

A Trial Package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Sent Free.

The Abbe Spallanzani was the first scientist to study systematically the chemical powers of the gastric juice, but it was by the careful and copyrighted experiments of Beaumont that the foundation of our exact knowledge of its composition and action was laid.

Beaumont was the army surgeon detailed at an obscure military post in Michigan, while it was a territory, and was called upon to treat a gun shot wound in the stomach in a Canadian voyageur named St. Martin. When the wound healed it left a permanent fistula that let the inside of what might be called the stomach and gastric juice leak from it.

Beaumont made scientific experiments with this crude means and used a tool, which today is recognized among the instruments of physiology.

Beaumont found the way for other men to follow. Many medicines down what the stomach does with food and what foods seem to be the best for the system.

Science also knows what the eastric juices are and how to make them best for the system.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, thanks to the four army surgeon and Alexis St. Martin, are the result of years of painstaking study, experiments with the genuine juices, soothing the irritated parts, and correcting the conditions of the stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are natural fruit and vegetable essences prepared in concentrated form and in tremendous power compressed into a tablet. They are the best known remedy for indigestion all over America and Canada. Full meals have been digested by them in glass tubes and they are sold by every druggist.

Fifty-cents is the number of 40,000 are them. They are meritorious and powerful. Go to your druggist and buy a package today, price 50c, or write for a free trial package to F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

PEARY TO SUBMIT HIS RECORDS TO SCIENTISTS OF ENGLAND AND ITALY

BY JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—As this correspondence was the first to announce the bitter and almost furious fight that was to be made in Congress over the appropriation for honor and reward Commander Peary, so it shall be the first to announce that Robert E. Peary is about to do that which will lift fully and for all time the stigma of doubt and uncertainty from his great achievement, and have him either short of his laurels or permanently crowned as the one successful Arctic explorer and discoverer of the century.

The Royal Geographical Society of England has visited Commander Peary to address it during the coming April in London. The Royal Society accompanies the invitation with the gracious assurance of high confidence in the sincerity of the Peary claim—and publicly requests as a mere matter of scientific courtesy that all may be permitted to read and study the records and proofs of the Peary discovery.

To this invitation Commander Peary has forwarded an equally polite acceptance with the assurance that all his proofs and records will be submitted at the time of his visit to the English Society.

Following upon this occasion Commander Peary will also speak, by invitation, before the Royal Italian Geographical Society at Rome, and will also exhibit to that body the proofs and records of his Arctic explorations.

These rare organizations are the critical arbiters of the world. The one at Rome is perhaps the older and greater of the two and is of high authority and repute than the Copenhagen Society which examined and accepted the claims of Dr. Cook.

When these great societies have passed upon the Peary claim there must be and will be either an end to Robert E. Peary or an end to the peril and doubt which has seriously distressed the credit and honor of the North Pole.

It is fortunate for the honor of our race that the matter is to be submitted to these high and conclusive tribunals, and that gossip and detraction are to have no further say.

Certainly it is to be hoped and consequently to be expected that the American Congress, pending the decision of these scientific bodies, will withhold all criticism of an American citizen who is generally believed to have reflected the highest credit upon his country and to have merited for himself an enduring fame.

LAW-MAKERS SANITARY SLAVES.

Not one ray of natural sunlight has ever come from the skies to penetrate the Senate chambers of the United States or the hall of the House of Representatives. Stale air, vitiated by the breath of a million or more men, first breathed by wide marble corridors, and then by various rows of vaulted chambers with stained glass skylights, which in its diluted and enfeebled state, reaches the two assembly halls of national deliberation, are the most impossible and unsanitary furnaces equipped to stand a siege or endure a bombardment, but never designed to withstand the brains of statesmen with the fresh air of the colored plains of our native land.

Whether the original architects of the Capitol were impressed with the biblical saying that "wisdom cometh from darkness," or whether they were under the influence of primeval reverence by isolation, they have constructed this stately monument, monstrary, ill-ventilated and unwholesome, in which the brain and the body of our statesmanship have slowly withered and died for many years and many decades.

There is not a State Capitol in the Republic so wretchedly arranged and unsanitary as the Capitol of the United States, despite deliberate debates from three to six long months of every year. Five Representatives ever leave those national halls as sound in health as when they entered them. Every Senator who remains in the service for a score of years finds his brain and body are magnified at every congressional funeral, and it is a marvel that intelligent statesmen and accomplished architects have endured these conditions so long.

The House of Representatives in its last session made practically rebellion against this sanitary slavery, and under the lead of a Massachusetts Congressman, who is a member of a bill for ventilation and sunlight.

Under this bill the entire corridor back of the Speaker's chair and the committee rooms behind it will be renewed and the entire Northeast side will be open to the day and the sun. The Speaker's desk, if not his throne, will be flooded with sunshine and after the monday luncheon he settled their tempers the Representatives of our great Commonwealth, to a soul—circle of the Capitol, can look back on the sunlight and their constituents straight in the face. If Congress sojourns in time the improvements will be made during the Summer.

SEEK SUNLIGHT AID FOR STATESMEN.

The Senate, conservative as always, awaits the House experiment before it removes from its own stately corridors and chambers on the northwest side. The Senate vainly imagines that it furnishes its own light and air and pretty much everything else that Congress needs, but it is not quite sure that the south and vigor which fresh air will impart to the House will inspire the older body to the modern improvement.

And so the sixty-third Congress at farthest may find the aged and venerable Senate deliberating for the first time with its face to the morning sun, and the young and rambunctious House closing its daily sessions under the blackness of midnight.

It will be an interesting psychological story of note, the effect of air and sunlight upon these purblind males of politics who have so long groped in the darkness and breathed in decrepit atmosphere under conditions which no horses would say.

It is a mistake to think that Senator Elkins was beaten or balked out of the chairmanship of the Senate committee for investigating high prices and the tariff. The West Virginian could have had the place if he would have it, but his bold dash toward the insurgent camp thoroughly scared the Aldrich oligarchy.

For one of two reasons Senator Elkins declined the chairmanship. Either because, as he says, he is getting older and does not feel equal to assuming this heavy responsibility to his duties, or can he would not say because he thinks the rest of the committee have tariff whitewash brushes protruding from their pocket pistol holsters, and he doesn't care to be mixed up with the rearranged result.

Senator Elkins is really a pretty honest man.

SMALLPOX IN FALL RIVER.

Mother and New Born Babe Victims of Disease.

FALL RIVER, Feb. 19.—The Board of Health today discovered two cases of smallpox in the thickly settled tenement district. The victims are Mrs. Andrew J. Dempsey of No. 32 Summer street and her new born baby. The smallpox broke out when she was burned a year ago. A guard was placed around the house and the two victims were discovered, to prevent the disease from spreading. They believe they have it under control.

TELLS OF DEATH IN NOTE.

Boy Goes to Reformatory Instead of to Grave.

"I remembered suicide because of my father and mother." It was a note in pencil by 15-year-old Hughes Devlin of No. 119 Hanover street, Lynn, and it was written before he ran away from home.

Finding threatened to kill his parents, according to their story told to Judge Sullivan in the Juvenile Court today, he was sent to the Concord Reformatory.

TAKE YOUR BABY TO SEE THE GOVERNOR ON TUESDAY

State House to Be Heated Just Right for the Little Visitors.

GOVERNOR DRAPER wants to meet the babies. He wants to meet them the day after to-morrow, Washington's birthday. He will be standing from 10:30 until 12:30 in the beautiful Hall of Flags at the State House, with Mrs. Draper at his side and the members of the staff in gold lace and braid behind him, and he wants the babies to come up and see him.

Men and women and boys and girls are expected to come to the Governor's reception on Washington's birthday, but the thing will not be a success, the Governor says, if mamma fails to bring the baby. "There ought to be a babies' day at the State House," the Governor said last night, "and inasmuch as we have all the holidays that people want I don't know a better day for babies' day than the day set apart to honor the Father of his Country. If Washington would be a pretty Father of his country, if the country didn't have any babies, wouldn't he? Besides, the Governor gives up the rest of the year to the duties of his office, and this is the only time when he can meet the little folks, tell them how well they are looking, and get new faith and courage from their innocent faces.

Letter Carriers Are Going.

"I was delighted last year when so many mothers came to the reception with a dozen or more babes in arms. I want to see the same little ones this year, and maybe two and dozens besides. The departments will be closed, but the State House will be warmed to the right temperature for babies.

Last year, on Washington's Birthday, the Governor shook hands with 5,500 people. This was the high-water mark for these receptions. William A. Murphy, secretary to the Governor, said yesterday that there is every reason for believing that Tuesday's figures will surpass the attendance of a year ago.

There will be one or two features on the program that haven't even been mentioned. For one thing the letter carriers, 500 strong and in full uniform, are coming up from Post Office square, with President Lawless and Postmaster Edward A. Mansfield at the head of the line. The carriers will bring their own band with them, which means that there will be plenty of first-class music for the Hall of Flags. Boylston Road will be stationed in Doric Hall.

And this isn't all, for the Scouts are coming, dressed in their always attractive kilts, and accompanied by their own pipers.

When you come up with the baby, of course you will be taken right to the main portal of the State House. You will come through Doric Hall, passing the heroic statue of Washington, and proceed through the grand entrance to the Hall of Flags, where the Governor will receive. The members of the staff will be on show in their glittering uniforms. Sixteen searers, ranged behind His Excellency will carry the emblems and flags of Massachusetts from colonial days down to the present.

Will Greet the Governor.

The Sons of the Revolution head the list of organizations which have accepted an invitation to be present in a body. Among others are the Colonial Wars, Sons of New England, the Sons of the American Revolution, the Society of Colonial Wars, the Grand Army of the Republic, the Antiquarian Society, the United Spanish Veterans, the Kearsarge Association of Naval Veterans, an Indian delegation, the Society of the Children of the Revolution, the Letter Carriers' Association, the Pope Cadets, the Lodge, the militia officers, the Ancient and Honorable Artillery, the Spanish War Pusillee Veterans, the Sons of Veterans, the Boston Police Relief Association, the British Naval and Military Association, the Highland Dress Association, the United Order of Pilgrim Fathers, the foreign consuls, the National Lancers, the United States Daughters of 1812, the Daughters of Veterans and the Sixth Regiment Veteran Association.

Folks who want to see these bodies, many of them in gorgeous uniforms, say see them enter from Ashburton Place.

But don't forget the baby!

The Beauty of Firm Flesh

Lies In the Power of Rich Blood To Keep It Ever Clear and Clean.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers Free.

The secret of firm, strong, supple flesh is—good, rich, constant flowing blood. When hollow cheeks appear and hidden pigments make the eyes look like burnt holes in a blanket, the blood is sick and out of tune.

The effect of impure and pure blood is seen at once in the face.

Impurities fill it with poisons, the flesh harbors these poisons, and the lungs cannot eliminate them as they should.

It needs a purifier. Stuart's Calcium Wafers give to the blood through the same channels as food all the strength and stimulus necessary to remove the impurities and to make rich corpuscles which will feed the body or fight its enemies.

Time was when poor blood purifiers had to be used—such as herbs and roots, powdered minerals, etc. Now, thanks to latter day achievement the Stuart process gives to the system the full rich strength of calcium Sulphide, the greatest blood purifier known to science.

These little powerful wafers are prepared by one of the most noted expert pharmaceutical chemists in the world, and so far as skill and care concerned no expense has been spared to make them perfect.

They contain Quassia, Golden Seal and Eucalyptus, each a most powerful aid to the blood of man.

Thousands of people use these wafers with religious zeal, and their testimonial evidence is an unfailing source of interest to one who reads it.

Melancholy marks every suffering woman, yet one should be armed with this knowledge and make up one's mind to try Stuart's Calcium Wafers at once. Every druggist carries them. Price 50c, or send us your name and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Miss Draper, Worth Million, A Fair Target For Cupid

Debutante daughter of the late General William F. Draper.

MISS MARGARET PRESTON DRAPER

She's Distinctively Yankee Her Father Puritan and Mother Blue Grass Belle—No Foreigners Need Apply.

BACHELORS—attention!

There is a new American girl heiress. She is distinctively American, a combination of Puritan New England and the Kentucky Bluegrass. The very house of lords is beautiful girls. She is sweet and unaffected. She is not quite nineteen years old. On her twenty-fifth birthday she will come into possession, in her own right, of $12,000,000, according to present calculation. And, so far as known, she is "heart whole and fancy free," as they say.

Who is this most desirable girl? None other than Miss Margaret Preston Draper of Hoosdale.

She is the only child of her father, the late General William F. Draper. Miss Margaret Draper, his youngest daughter and his only child by his present wife, is to receive her proportionate share in the twelvemillion dollar Draper estate.

One-half of the estate goes to the widow, Miss Draper's mother. The other half is to be divided among the three sons, the two daughters and their children.

Honored by Italy's Queen.

She was presented at court and so charmed Queen Margherita with her fluency in Italian that the gracious queen presented her a beautiful carved, golden dish.

Fresh and blooming are also numbered among Miss Draper's languages, as well as the purest English. She is quite small and plays and sings.

Many years have been spent in Washington. There she made her debut on December 22 at the Draapers' Washington residence. The diplomatic set was out in force. Miss Draper wore white satin with a long court train and a tiara of diamonds and of pearls worth $20,000, one of her father's last gifts to her.

Immediately following her entrance into society Miss Draper was showered with invitations, but all social plans were graciously set by the sudden illness and death of General Draper. Miss Draper has temporarily retired to Lakewood, N. J., where she is the guest of friends.

In addition, Miss Draper is a presumptive heiress in her mother's right estate, and just her prospects are as golden as money can make them.

Mother Kentucky Belle.

Miss Draper's mother was Miss Susan Preston of Lexington, Ky. The marriage of General William F. Draper and Miss Susan Preston at Lexington in June, 1903, was the first of that romantic series of five Draper marriages to five Kentucky beauties. General Draper's first wife was Miss Lydia D. Joy of Nantucket, who bore him three sons and a daughter.

As his last child and the only child of his second marriage, Margaret Draper was the apple of the stern old General's eye. She was brought up with all the care and fullness of refinement that wealthy parents could give. When General Draper was in Washington Margaret went to the private school that President Cleveland's children attended.

Life abroad added much to the training of Miss Draper. For six months, when her father was appointed Ambassador to Italy by President McKinley, she learned Italian with juvenile facility and she soon was able to talk circles around her accomplished father when it came to conversing in Italian.

Not An "Athletic" Girl.

The young heiress has few intimate friends in Hoosdale, because she has passed so little of her life in her home town.

She is not an "athletic" girl, who shoots and hunts and fishes and swims and emulates every form of sport that man follow. She likes pretty gowns and likes to dance.

Romance has not been connected with Miss Draper's name so far. In her debut she was immensely admired and sundry noble, foreign diplomats and representatives of rich families here and abroad were very active in paying attention to the latest Massachusetts belle.

Speaking of foreign admirers, an impecunious nobleman who thinks he might acquire this charming American girl and her money, with probably little work on his part, is to be in Boston for Miss Draper is the favorite daughter of the house

GUILD DROPS HARPOON TAKES UP THE LAMPOON

Former Governor Refuses to Comment on His Denunciation of J. P. Morgan.

FORMER Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., declined last night to add to the scathing denunciation of J. Pierpont Morgan which he published yesterday in his newspaper, the Commercial Bulletin and in which he characterized the most powerful financier in the United States as:

"A beefy, red-faced, thick-necked, financial bully, drunk with wealth and power."

The ex-Governor, whose trenchant exposure of Morgan, the New Haven "crowd" and their attempts to take possession of the State administration, was a thunderbolt in State Street and on Beacon Hill, declared that he had devoted a great deal of thought to his article; that it took a long time to prepare; that he deliberated on it exhaustively, and that he could not, offhand, add to it or embellish it.

"I said all I had to say on that subject in my editorial," he said. "I cannot talk off-hand on so important a subject. I have nothing further to say regarding the alternative between Morgan and socialism for the people of Massachusetts, nor about any other phase of it.

"However," added the ex-Governor, laughing, "I have to speak at the banquet at the opening of the Harvard Lampoon building tonight, and you know I want to keep my mind in a facetious mood. You know this is a very grave subject."

New Structure Dedicated.

In the privacy of the banquet hall of the new Lampoon Building, at 30 Bow street and Bow streets, Cambridge, the former editors of that celebrated Harvard paper —now among the country distinguished men—had a fine time today, going through the secret ceremonies of dedicating the structure to the cases of merriment and mirth and satire at Harvard.

For after thirty-four years of existence, the Lampoon is now housed in a cozy home of its own, is the only college publication in America that owns a building, and the building, so far as anybody knew to the contrary, is the only newspaper office in the country that boasts of a banquet hall.

In fact the banquet hall is likely to be the principal institution of the Lampoon. At least the rival paper, the Crimson, so indicated yesterday, when it described the Lampoon Building somewhat as follows:

"The sanctum is like an enormous guncbhoot. Each tile of the roof bears a figure of an ibis, with a cartridge in its mouth. Most interesting room is the banquet room. There is in this room a rare old Dutch sideboard, which, contents and all, from the Town Hall at Amsterdam and delivered with little breaking in this city.

Ex-Governor Guild Presided.

"The interior is decorated with a motto bearing the Latin proverb: 'Coelum non cammum mutat qui trans mare (ferrum'—which, translated, means: 'They who cross Mt. Auburn street may change their point of view but not their spirits'."

However, it is to the entirety, it was a very dignified and distinguished gathering. Former Governor Guild presided. The following were present: Senator Robert O. Grant, '73, the jurist and author; Professor Barrett Wendell, '77, of the Harvard English department; Professor Frederick J. Stimson, '76; Curtiss Bowditch, '81, of Hudson; John T. and Edmund M. Wheelwright, '76, among the founders of the Lampoon, and Owen Wister, the author. All of them were formerly editors of the Lampoon. Other seventy-six were present.

The building is two stories, surmounted by the sacred ibis, the symbol of the wit and humor of the paper. It is built in Flemish style with gables. The editorial and banquet rooms are decorated in Flemish oak. The building was put up with subscriptions of former editors.

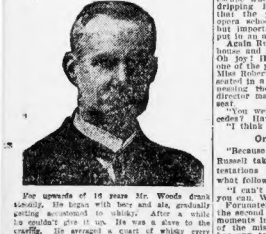
There were several other house warmings and banquets in Cambridge last night —among them the Porcellian Club, the A. D. Club and Zeta Psi—and Miss Cambridge kept awake unduly hours, held her ears in silence.

CURED OF DRINK

Mr. Woods Lost All Craving in Only Three Days

During the past year the newspapers have been giving accounts of the discovery of a genuine and lasting cure for the habit or disease of alcoholism (drinking) in three days. That there is such a cure cannot now be disputed. Hundreds of remarkable cures of alcoholism are occurring in Boston and throughout New England, and elsewhere.

One of the notable cases is that of a New Yorker, Edward J. Woods.



For upwards of 16 years Mr. Woods drank steadily. He began with beer and ale, gradually getting accustomed to whisky. After a while he couldn't get it up. He was a slave to the craving. He averaged a quart of whisky every 24 hours, sometimes more. His health was becoming ruined, he lost one position after another.

Drunkards Cured Secretly.

His story leaked about the 3 days' treatment, induced him to try it, and now he is completely cured. Not only this, but Mr. Woods has induced many hundreds of others to follow the same method, and they are thoroughly freed from the alcoholic craving. A great number of homes have been and are being made happy. Mr. Woods has written and published a book telling of his own experience and describing the method. The treatment can be given at home with the drinker's knowledge; or if he is so far under the control of the poison of liquor that he doesn't want to be cured, then any wife or other relative can cure him secretly. He will lose all desire and appetite, the sight or smell of liquor. This valuable book will be mailed in a plain wrapper postpaid to anyone who writes confidentially to Mr. Edward J. Woods, 534 Sixth Ave., 3195, New York, N. Y. With the book will be sent many testimonials of those who were cured, including readers who first read about the wonderful method in The American. Boston medical endorsement included. Most investigation can be made; cut this out.

UNDERSTUDIES TO RESCUE! OPERA IS SAVED BY TWO SINGERS AS STARS FAIL

Singers who made performance possible.

MISS ANNA ROBERTS

UGO COLUMBINI

Don Jose Ill, and Mercedes Tardy, Director Russell Flushes Required Artists.

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

WITH a great audience assembled to witness a performance of "Carmen" at the Opera House last evening, there came very near to being no performance at all. Those who impatiently awaited the arising of the curtain knew the conception of the chaos which reigned behind.

Paul Bourrillon, the French tenor, was to sing Don Jose. Bourrillon was making up his dressing room when he was suddenly ill with indigestion. He shouted with pain and a doctor doctor was summoned.

"This man cannot sing to-night," said the physician.

Immediately there was an uproar in three languages, and somebody sent for the understudy.

Columbini was amazed a moment later to be dragged from his seat into the corridor where Russell excitedly told him that he must sing Jose.

"But I have had no rehersal."

"No matter."

"But maybe I will not remember the music."

"I will pray for you, my friend," said the director pushing him towards the dressing rooms. So the bewildered tenor was pulled into the regimentals of Jose and pushed on the stage where he had to sing or be covered with confusion. He elected to sing and sing well.

Had Sympathy of Audience.

Considering the circumstances Columbini made an excellent Jose. He had the voice and the stage presence and he soon gained confidence. The audience had been apprised of the change and were in hearty sympathy with him.

Russell was mopping his brow at this escape when the stage director rushed up dripping Italian expletives. He was worried that the young woman student of the opera school who was to sing the small but important part of Mercedes, had not put in an appearance or sent any word.

Again Russell rushed to the front of the house and cast his eye over the audience. Oh joy! He descried Miss Anna Roberts, one of the young contraltos of the company. Miss Roberts was in evening dress and was seated in a stall with the intention of witnessing the performance. She gave the director making signs to her and left her seat.

"You were studying the music of Mercedes? Have you learned it?"

"I think so, why."

One More Understudy.

"Because you've got to sing it," said Russell taking her by the arm. The protestations of Columbini were nothing to what followed but they fell on deaf ears.

"I can't help it. You must do the best you can. We cannot stop the opera now."

Fortunately Mercedes does not appear until the second act and Miss Roberts' dressing room in which to arrange that costume of the missing singer, which did not fit her any too well. She was finally ready and made her entrance in the time. She was nervous about her. She sang as though she had been singing the part for months.

When Director Russell found that all was well he fell into a chair and proceeded to be sick himself. The strain had been too great. But Bourrillon's doctor soon put him right.

In spite of these unexpected accidents the opera went well and the big audience was delighted.

New Carmen Is Seen.

Faly Derenne proved a worthy successor to Maria Gay as Carmen. The young Frenchwoman has a different conception of the role than Gay. Her Carmen is not coarse or vulgar, but seductive, fascinating and passionate. Her voice in addition is not so impressive as Gay's, but sufficiently interesting. Her voice is a beautiful mezzo soprano, and is suited to the music of Carmen for the most part, but there are passages where a deeper, coarser tone is required than she can furnish.

Baklanoff, Bronskaia, Lewicka and the others in the cast have been heard before in their respective roles.

At the matinee "Don Pasquale" was the bill, followed by the famous "Dance of the Hours," from "Gioconda." Alice Nielsen was again the wiry, arch and thoroughly delightful Norina. She was in excellent voice and bubbled over with vitality and good spirits. The performance was a delight. Fornari and Tavecchia, as Doctor Malatesta and Don Pasquale, were most satisfying. The great ballet went entranged.

YOUNGER SET, SMARTLY CLAD, GRACE MATINEE

"Don Pasquale," followed by the grand corps de ballet of the Boston opera company in the "Dance of the Hours," from "La Gioconda," combined yesterday after noon to make a festive performance for the younger members of the exclusive set.

Admiration centred in Mrs. F. S. Converse's box. She accompanied her graceful little daughters and their friend. Miss Wrenn. Mrs. Converse was stunning in black velvet, the corsage skirt showing a bodice of crepe de chine generously trimmed in Valenciennes. Girls were gowned alike in black frocks with peasant bodices of white net.

Mrs. Richard Saltonstall also played hostess for an attractive group of young folk, appearing in dark green broadcloth and picture hat.

Thomas W. Lawson is never too busy to devote attention to his daughters, and Miss Gene enjoyed the performance with extreme zest, appearing in garnet broadcloth and hat of black beaver.

Mrs. S. Reed Anthony was in black, the bodice of Persian net.

Miss Esther Slater was handsome in garnet cloth, entertaining with her brother, a coterie of young friends.

Governor Draper's youngest son arrived early with several classmates, and William Hill's box was occupied by a handsome group of children, with Master Hill as host.

Mrs. James H. Connolly entertained a young folk party, including Miss Marion Hall, who wore a modish princess gown of blue broadcloth.

A palatot and toque of lynx set off to perfection the handsome smoke-colored gown worn by Mrs. Oliver Ames, who entertained a large party, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Phoebe West.

Miss Margie Wood appeared in sauve blue velvet, and her sister, Miss Carrie, wore poppy red velvet.

Mrs. Wirt Dexter had a large box party, selecting a matinee toilette of taupe chiffon velvet.

Mrs. Fred Burnham was in metallic gray velvet, with moleskin peleriue.

Mrs. George D. Pearley came with several friends, wearing a redingote of black velvet, fur hat and stole.

NEW THEATRE DROPS OPERA

Next Season Will Be Given Over Entirely to Drama.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Official announcement was made to-day by Winthrop Ames, director of the New Theatre, that there will be no more operas of any sort given in that house next season. He declared that the theatre subscribers cannot now be cared for adequately, and that with the supplemented opera season they had been left out altogether. Many improvements are being planned for the theatre, he said, and remaldrens are now at work on these. Mr. Winthrop said the theatre was proving a success from a financial point of view.

'DAN' MAHONEY LOOK OUT! SUFFRAGISTS ARE AFTER YOU!

State Senator Forces Hearing on Bill In Cramped Quarters, so That's Why.

THE women suffragists are on the trail of Senator "Dan" Mahoney of Dorchester. Mahoney is in for an awful lacing. The women are going to "hang it to him" when they get him.

In the van is Mme. Lydia Lipkowska, the prima donna. Mme. Lipkowska speaks no English—only Russian. And if Russian spoken language sounds anything like the Russian alphabet looks, so can you, say Mahoney.

The suffragists want Mahoney's scalp because he won't give them room enough to accommodate their annual descent upon the Legislature. "Little 2400" the room that Senator Mahoney has allotted to the women—would scarcely hold the hats of all the women who want to get in the hearing. The Way women hats go nowadays, But Mahoney says it has got to do, and that's all there is to it.

Mahoney the Rebel.

For Wednesday evening, when the hearing of the Suffragists' annual "votes for women" bill is to be held before the Committee on Constitutional Amendments, the women want the use of the hall of the House of Representatives. There is ample precedent. But Mahoney won't stand for it. Then they hired Ford Hall and invited the committee to meet them there. Again Mahoney rebelled, although the committee willingly went over to meet the Chamber of Commerce.

"If we had known you but we'd have more room," said one vigorous young suffragist yesterday. Mahoney figured it out himself whether that implied threat should induce him to be for or against woman suffrage.

Last year so many women went to the State House that only a few squirmed into Room 240, where the hearing was held. This year a large platform has been erected on the side of the piece. When the women were crowded down on their request for the use of the hall of the House of Representatives, they whipped in and took option on Ford Hall. Eight of the eleven committee members yielded to the pressure and agreed to go along with the women. Dan Mahoney, the chairman, was the one whose resolve enabled the committee.

"Dan" Tries to Be Brave.

"Personal grounds," said Mahoney when they asked him why.

"Would you put your personal matter above the convenience and comfort of the public?" one of the most alluring of the young suffragists held both a kiss.

"That's not the question," said Mahoney coyly. "The only way anything else under the circumstances."

"Mahoney has joined the 'pussyfoot-speed' crowd," was another suffragist. "Yes, I mean every word of it," she added, when asked to explain herself. "I mean to stick to get from a real live cross word heard from a lady's lips and a sufferin' lady, at that.

So the women are going to have two meetings Wednesday night. One will be the hearing at Room 240, State House, when women after women will tell the committee why Mahoney is a mean man. The other one will be at Ford Hall. When they get through with the legislators they will troop over to Ford Hall one by one and tell the assembled throng there all about it—and how some.

Mahoney says, nonchalantly enough, just well be at the hearing. He probably doesn't feel as slouchy as he looks. For the woman's wrath, so graphically described by the fair Mr. Mahoney, is some wrath, and when she be a suffragist and charges the several hundred of her, Brother Dan Mahoney, if she once turns loose.

"We sent the police to-day," said Mrs. George Dodd of Brookline, yesterday. "What we have done all in our power to prevent disorder and disturbance at the meeting, and that the responsibility for the disorderliness and disturbance that will arise from the use of the small committee room we do not accept."

"To offset this, however, we have encouraged Dodd all the evening and a part of the suffrage speeches made at the State House will be repeated at Ford Hall, and overflow meeting there. All during the week there have been people going to Ford Hall to inquire about the meeting, and we expect that it will be a large one. Women suffrage meeting every held in Massachusetts. There will be two policemen there."

Other "Marked" Statesmen.

The leaders of the suffrage movement in this State report that there are other marked men under the "gilded dome" at the State House. For instance, a State official received two middle-aged, well-to-do looking women on the third floor of the House on official business the other day. He had two free tickets to the "Dance of the Hour" at Ford Hall.

At the public hearing and the Ford Hall overflow rally next Wednesday night, besides Miss Lipkowska, Louis Post of Chicago will be a distinguished visiting suffragist. Among those who will talk at both meetings are:

Mrs. Robert Bremer—Mrs. J. Lovell Little, Jr., and Mrs. Bertram.

BAKE GIRLS AT ODDS OVER MEASURE FOR SHORT SUNDAY

Bill to Cut Out Afternoon Work Prevents Church Going In the Morning.

DO the bakery girls of Boston prefer to go to church Sunday mornings or to go out for an afternoon with their best followers?

That is the issue involved in the Rausch Sunday-closing bakery bill, which will take the members of the Master Bakers' Cooperative Association of Boston to the State House to-morrow morning. They are going to try to pass the bill, notwithstanding the flutter it has caused in feminine bake-shop circles.

But the members of the Legislature are in trouble—in serious trouble, beside which lawyers, "Dueling company," "High cost of living" and other weighty measures are mere bagatelles.

Here is the way it is:

The bake-shops of Boston are now permitted to be open from 7 to 10 o'clock in the morning and from 2 to 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Result, the bake-shops cannot go anywhere of a Sunday afternoon, and they feel it keenly when the pretty girls think about it in the benches in the good old Summer time.

The master bakers feel that way about it, too, and finally handed the request of many of the girls that the Sunday afternoon privilege be done away with. They have had a bill introduced permitting bake shops to remain from 7 to 11 o'clock Sunday morning and stay closed the rest of the day.

Now comes the girls—some of them—and say that is equally bad because it bars them from going to church Sunday mornings.

Robert Rausch of No. 16 Central square, president of the Master Bakers' Cooperative Association, says that he would be willing to keep his shop open until midnight Saturday if necessary. He thinks parents will prefer hearing in the morning. On the other hand, Mr. Rausch's chief clerk and she would round the Saturday night proposition, but the 11 o'clock Sunday idea is not so good, because it bars church.

William Saint of No. 89 Mattapan street, East Boston, takes another view of it. He is for all day closing or nothing. He thinks girls can "observe" the public by buying their baked goods Saturdays. He says the new bill interferes with church services. He would rather let thing stand as they are, since "most all the Sunday girls" are since. Mr. Swain's head clerk, Miss Agnes Keegan, is another employer. She wants to go to church.

BATON FOR LAUDER'S AIDE.

Comedian Makes Gift to Charles Frank, Orchestra Director.

Harry Lauder gave an ebony baton last night to Conductor Charles Frank of the American Music Hall orchestra, who has been touring the country with Mr. Lauder of late as his personal conductor on special days in advance of the Lauder concerts. The presentation took place at the end of Mr. Lauder's turn. Mr. Lauder made a very complimentary speech.

"Speech" pealed the house. After applause had brought Frank stood up and said: "Thank you, Mr. Lauder, who studied at home and wished also further success. Then he finished up with the singing of 'Auld Lang Syne.'"

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Mel Sheppard was given a chance to show his wares with the Twenty-Second Regiment team for the one-mile regimental accords at the Seventh Regiment armory to-night. Sheppard was a member of the Twenty-Second Regiment armory to-night.

Sheppard cut loose in the second relay for the Twenty-Second and turned over a two-yard lead to Jim McGinnis and Harry Gissing won the relay. Sheppard's time was 3 min. 27 2-5 sec. Gissing's was 3 min. 25 2-5 sec. Sheppard's time was Sheppard's 51 1-5.

Policeman Saves Life of Skater Who Broke Through Ice

Metropolitan Park Officer O'Connor Rescues Cambridge Man In Charles.

Risking his life, Metropolitan Park Policeman O'Connor crawled over the thin ice that covered the Charles river at Brighton yesterday afternoon and rescued George S. Cormack, forty-one, of No. 93 Belmont street, Cambridge, from death by drowning. When Policeman O'Connor reached Cormack, he was sinking for the third time and was exhausted.

Cormack was skating on the cemetery side of the river when he broke through. He made several ineffectual attempts to climb to safety on the ice, but the coating was thin and each time he was plunged into the water again.

He shouted for help. Policeman O'Connor heard his cuteries and rushed to Cormack's aid. Carrying a ladder, the policeman found it difficult to cross the thin ice and he fell into the water three times. Finally he reached Cormack, shouted to him to keep his courage up, shoved the ladder and pulled the drowning man to safety. Cormack was resting comfortably last night.

PICKPOCKET AT FIRE.

False Alarm Cost Woman $10, But Police Get Robber's Derby.

A false alarm last night cost Mrs. A. F. Cusack of No. 80 Hollingsworth street, Lynn, about ten dollars. And the police a new derby hat as a clue to the arrest of the thief who got the money. The alarm was rung in because smoke was coming out of a chimney in Cusack's home on Market street. Mrs. Cusack was one of the crowd that rushed to the scene, but when the apparatus appeared. While the firemen were working a man walked her pocketbook. Patrolman Tierney saved down Market street after the man and as the State street freight yard caught his hat in a pass some one. The thief got away with the money.

ALL SECTIONS NOW COMPLAIN OF CARS

John Ritchie, Jr., Declares Protests Against Service Are Heard Everywhere.

What the people of the different sections of Boston really think of the Boston Elevated Railroad system and its service, John Ritchie Jr., told in an article written for last night's Transcript, descriptive of Mayor Fitzgerald's town meetings, or neighborhood talks.

Ritchie is a member of the Boston Board of Health, president of the Adam Clark Corporation, which makes telescopes, onetime assistant at the Harvard Observatory, former official collector and distributor of astronomical news for the United States and a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Here is what he says:

"One of the most significant of the expressions of public opinion is that from the Boston Elevated Railway is not treating the people with fairness. This is not the first time that there has been aroused a keen resentment to which no less body established, but the recent carefully and elaborate statements of improvement associations, which have been published on the subject.

"Strange as it may seem, no one has complained on account of the crowding of the cars in proportions with wide gaps between them, so that the man who has excess cars an hour past his door is not accommodated by a car every five minutes but two three together every fifteen minutes, and everything else has been criticized.

"The people at East Boston were unanimous in their condemnation of the fences in the Devonshire street station, that drives them into a second flight to get their trains they are entitled to a free continuation of their ride.

"In Charlestown the citizens are up in arms against the arrangement at Main street and the meagre surface accommodations from the same street to the city. In South Boston they criticise the cars and their terminals; they criticise the neighborhood Dorchester to help in the complaints, noting that at Savin Hill avenue the cars are as near Boston as at Dudley street station. There is ten minutes and more of idle without getting nearer to the destination.

"The Dorchester people have their own plaints, while the Vine street meeting was almost violent in its denunciation of the Dudley street 'noise.' In which it is said that hundreds of people make mistakes and are forced to pay a second fare in order to continue their journey. Jamaica Plain is disturbed on account of the car being made of old horse cars outlined together and the lack of direct service to Park street, while Brighton is in need of various improvements in its surroundings."

A special event for a trophy offered by one of the members of the B. A. A. was won by E. F. Gleason, who made a score of 25 out of a possible 25. The next best was second with a score of 24. The score:

Remember that the Difference Between This Store and Others Affects Your Pocket Book!

¶ We buy only such lots as have been sacrificed for some legitimate reason—a Sample Line, a Manufacturer who needs money quickly, a Mill's Clearance, an Overstock, etc.—in fact, no lot is too small, no lot too big! But other stores buy similar lots! Where then is the Difference?

¶ Just this: When other stores place a lot on sale it may be kept on sale as long as they wish, and whether or not a lower price is substituted is purely optional. But HERE it is different. EVERY LOT MUST BE PLACED ON SALE AT SUCH AN EXTRAORDINARY PRICE THAT IT WILL SELL OUT WITHIN TWO WEEKS, or else WE suffer losses by the Automatic Price Reductions ... NOTHING CAN STAY HERE LONGER THAN 5 WEEKS.

¶ Is it not logical to assume that a store that MUST sell out every lot in less than 5 weeks, MUST BUY BETTER BARGAINS and must GIVE BETTER VALUES AND LOWER PRICES.

Wednesday Macleod went over to Mr. Hamlin yesterday morning and had a brief talk with him and Senator Burnham. It was presumed at the time that the object of the call was to have Hamlin with the chairman MacLeod, and I doubt if there will be before the middle of the week. That is all I can say at the present time.

Mr. Hamlin was perfectly willing to talk about the rough passage of the good soup Battle, or the orange groves of Italy, or the Paris fonds out not a word about politics

All New to Hamlin.

As a succession of running for Congress in the [illegible] district has been made to Mr. Hamlin's [illegible] man or child. All that Mr. Hamlin has heard about it has come from newspaper reporters, and there you are. He hasn't given the thing a moment's serious consideration. O, yes, Mr. MacLeod was in, and they had an interesting talk about foreign travel, and so on.

The impression seems to prevail that Mr. Hamlin, not being a resident, was waiting for a louder call from the Fourteenth. In the meantime Democrats began to talk about Bird of Walpole, the paper manufacturer, and Tom Thatcher of Yarmouth, president of the Barnstable County Agricultural society, and E. Gerry Brown of Brockton, who it is said, would have to advance no more money, in a short campaign, and being well known and widely advertised.

On the Republican side Robert Orr Harris, Frank G. Wheatley and William H. Buchanan are in the midst of a red hot fight. The Democrats hold their caucuses February 23 and their convention Brockton on March 1. The Republican caucuses are set for February 28 and the Republican convention for March [illegible]

Not one of the three Republican rivals is a "native son" of the district. William H. Buchanan of Brockton was born in Ohio, where our Presidents come from forty five years ago. Once upon a time he ran a weekly paper down in Skowhegan, Me., and was happy. Now he takes about $30,000 a year out of his Brockton Times and rides in an auto

Dr. Wheatley's Candidacy.

Dr. Frank G. Wheatley of Abington, eldest of the aspirants, although he has yet to reach the sixty mark, first saw the light up in Woodbury, Vt. Dr. Wheatley is a physician of standing and a politician in class A. The doctor came within an ace of beating the late Congressman Lovering for the nomination in 1908, and many of the Republican workers of the district argue on a contingency that he is now the "logical" candidate. Dr. Wheatley has had several terms in the State Senate. He is not what one would call a novice.

Judge Robert Orr Harris of the Superior Court, whose campaign because of the Judge's position will have to be conducted by others, was District Attorney for Plymouth and Norfolk counties for nine years. For twenty-three years he maintained a law office in Brockton, making his home hard by in East Bridgewater

There will be one hundred and thirty-three delegates in the Republican district convention, which will be held at Brockton

EMINENT LEGAL EXPERTS OPPOSE SECRECY IN POLICE MATTERS

"Give the People the Facts; Warn Girls and Their Mothers, and We Shall Annihilate Vicious White Slave Traffic, If We Have Proper Laws," Say Watch and Ward Society Officials

Ward Society and its laudable efforts to check certain forms of vice—vice which O'Meara says is practically non-existent save in the minds of this society. He charged that society as putting such sensational statements forward only to get funds from a public grievously misled and imposed upon.

As the Watch and Ward Society has for its officers men highest in the most leadership of the Commonwealth, the commissioner's charge is a very serious one and they have not been slow to accept his challenge. At the "White Slave" bill hearing several of the speakers made effective reply to O'Meara, notably Byron H. Johnson, who read a list of the eminent men in the society and said they accepted full responsibility for every one of its agents and their acts.

200 Illegal Places in City.

J. Frank Chase, secretary, told the joint judiciary committee that not only are there more than 200 houses of prostitution in Boston, but that several could be seen in the heart of Beacon Hill and from the State House windows. That was his reply to O'Meara.

With the police committed to and the eminently respectable members of the Watch and Ward Society making no end of obtaining money under false pretense and counter-charges of inefficiency and neglect, District Attorney Pelletier, who also declares himself in favor of the white slave bill, makes his position very clear in the following careful, guarded statement prepared for the Sunday American.

I may say, too, that I believe the Watch and Ward Society has done good work in the community as a private organization, so far as the means at hand would permit. With a total expenditure last year of less than $6,000, it cannot be expected that its means and methods will be of the type produced by richer salaried agents.

Will Hunt Down Criminals.

Whether Secretary Chase is in error, or has exaggerated the real condition when he says "We believe the annual traffic in human souls in this city for this purpose (i. e., white slave traffic) amounts to hundreds," I cannot say and do not care to decide.

Police Commissioner O'Meara challenges the statement openly. His official as a trial police official, a man of the mental equipment, ripe experience and unquestioned integrity, strongly attracts my credence.

However, I will say this: that all the power of the district attorney's office, and I feel that it can [illegible] in this line for law and [illegible] —that all our power and authority will be used to detect and prosecute such heinous crimes.

We cannot [illegible] Boston Summon a special grand jury for special investigation, and the routine work must first be attended to, else crime will be rampant and the criminal go without restraint. This means that the time which can be given to special matters is limited, for the grand jurors must serve a period of six months, devoting one day each month regularly to routine work. Furthermore, the present staff of the District Attorney is fully occupied in disposing of some 350 cases a month, and for any extended investigation extra assistance in the office would be required.

Will Hear All Complaints.

For these reasons it is most desirable, if not impossible, as has been the custom, to investigate cases in advance, to require complainants to state their evidence in full, and then only to in some shape for presentation to the Grand Jury. Citizens' inquiries and complaints will be received. Investigation will be made, and the law will prosecute all such cases.

Despite these limitations, however, we stand ready to hear the complaints of reputable citizens and if facts, evidence and witnesses are forthcoming [illegible] and by this I mean by reputable citizens, will be presented, we will prosecute all such cases vigorously and fearlessly.

While [illegible] much has been said in the papers which I believe to be unfair to the officials and officers unfortunately reputable, diligent, painstaking and courageous in their work, whether originating in the usual course of duty [illegible] assigned to them specially by me.

ATTORNEY ROE SAYS PUBLICITY IS GREATEST DETERRENT TO CRIME

"PUBLICITY has done more than anything, unless it be education, to save hundreds of girls in the last three years in our part of the country. Warn the mothers that their children of tender years, if allowed to run through the streets, are in as great a peril as they would be in an Indian village with a man-eating tiger from the jungle prowling near. Publicity, publicity. It is education in itself. It is the cure. Warn the mothers. Keep it up. Never stop it. Cry from the front pages in newspapers and magazines."—CLIFFORD G. ROE.

the "futility of civil procedure," to use his own words, are unable to decide whether it is the opinion of any of the officers either sense of humor or prosecution, or a mad with a stubborn determination to vindicate his overpowering vanity by stubbornly ignoring a very potent statute.

Under the Revised Laws, Chapter 101, Section 8, it is possible for the police to get an injunction from the Superior Court of courts against anybody, who conducts a disorderly house, as committing a business which is a common nuisance.

The idea of the law is that when such a house is proved to be disorderly and after an injunction has been issued the offenders are liable to a swift, summary, direct punishment of the judge issuing the injunction for contempt. No legal delays, no [illegible], no trials by jury. Just plain jailing for contempt of court follows. O'Meara says that he would like the injunction against a certain house and the evidence got out and ask for it. It would be violated. Then he writes:

The case is disposed of just as it had happened in all previous cases of civil procedure with like expectations of the police. The title of the real estate was transferred and the injunction, except under most flagrant conditions, which probably would never arise, because offenders, I presume, would not dare, about $75 and would have cost a great deal more but for the fact that the legal gentlemen who made appearances in court were made by the Commissioner's secretary.

O'Meara Got Tired Easily.

"It was worth while, however, in order that a fresh test of the futility of civil procedure might be made.

This is a most important light on the Commissioner's mental processes. He goes to so much trouble to make sure that civil procedure in such cases must needs be futile that he himself, when he attempted to try out what lawyers say is a most difficult thing to do, failed utterly in common intelligence, and because the Commissioner throws up his hands and quits.

"I rather thought that part of his resignation was to work. I believe, with Mr. Pelletier, who is most reluctant to criticise any police officer, that Commissioner O'Meara did not see what was to prevent the Commissioner from bringing another injunction, but I am told that Chief Inspector Hall, who has charge of the records of the department, was directed by the Commissioner to bring no further injunctions. Mr. O'Meara is not a lawyer, but he is a man of affairs and has had considerable experience in the courts. He should have seen that the injunction was not dissolved, but was still in force, and that the only thing necessary was to bring the evidence of the case to the attention of the court, and the injunction would be enforced.

"Instead of this he has allowed the case to be dismissed, and by this I mean by reputable citizens, will be presented, we will prosecute all such cases vigorously and fearlessly.

While [illegible] much has been said in the papers which I believe to be unfair to the officials and officers unfortunately reputable, diligent, painstaking and courageous in their work, whether originating in the usual course of duty [illegible] assigned to them specially by me.

AVERT DANGER IN POLLOCK RIP SLUE

Skippers Approve Decision of Board to Buoy Off New Channel.

The decision of the United States Light House Board to have off the Eastern or Great Round Shoal channel in Nantucket Sound for the use of heavy draft ships is welcomed by ship captains and pilots who have been using the treacherous and badly congested channel known as the Pollock Rip Slue for the greater part of many a ship.

The decision of the board does not mean that the Pollock Rip channel will be abandoned, but that heavy draft ships shall take the deeper channel and avoid the tortuous passages of the slue. The lights and buoys now maintained in the slue will remain there and there will be two channels marked instead of one.

Captain W. F. Quinn, of Clifton & Quinn, coast pilots, who take most of the heavy draft ships through the sound, heartily approves of the decision of the board.

"There is water enough in the slue if you know where to find it, but I am very glad to have the government keep off the Eastern channel with his buoys," he said also is congested and there is a new sand bar making to the northward of that place where the Herald Hill one sank that forces us to make a wide detour to the westward in making a landing there. There is water enough, but it is dangerous. The main advantage of sending the new channel is not so much that there is not water enough in the slue, but that it will stop the gut of vessels in that channel."

Captain O'Brien agreed with his partner in approving the decision.

It is probable that the slue will be used by the coasting ships more or less as before, the sailing vessels and deep water ships will use the new channel to a greater extent.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Feb. 19.—Twenty years as a railroad newsboy is the record of James A. Doherty of Dorchester avenue, Boston, employed by the G. W. Armstrong Dining Room and News Company. Jack, as he is commonly called, is the oldest in this branch of the news service in this section of the country and is proud of his record.

His first run was on the old Haymarket square station of the original Boston & Maine system at Boston, being then employed by the Massachusetts News Company which later went over to the Armstrong Company, and Jack went with it.

Doherty is known as a hard worker and is classed as a hustler, having at times turned in nearly $200 in a day's work on an excursion train.

For a dozen years or more he has covered the run on trains No. 11, leaving Boston for Portland at 12:40 p. m. and 64, having Portland at 12:40 p. m. for Boston over the Eastern division, where he enjoys a long and intimate acquaintance with the traveling public

PROPERTY-OWNERS BLAMED BY HEALTH OFFICIALS FOR BAD TENEMENT CONDITIONS

THE avarice of grasping property owners who are not interested in their tenements than they are in the [illegible] of their tenants is [illegible] responsible for the congested conditions [illegible] Boston's most crowded sections. But while this situation is largely due to [illegible] tion, health officials who are in close touch with the facts, declare this is not the most crowded city in the country, as the investigation commissioners appointed by Governor [illegible] New York, the Boston inspectors say is much worse than Boston, because the building laws are not enforced as well and many rooms that do not open in any way to the light and air.

In an attic room in Boston's North End a man and his wife and six children were found. In another house tenants were sleeping in the kitchen. In other houses people sleep in cellars. Many are compelled by these things only to return in a few days and find the same condition over again. More inspectors are needed in Boston to [illegible] control.

Health Commissioner John Ritchie, Jr., takes decided issue with the statements that Boston is the most crowded city in the land. So does his co-worker in the investigation, Inspector North and Sanitary Inspector Thomas Jordan, who has made a study of this problem for the past twenty years, and says that the statement is absurd.

"It is a most difficult problem to deal with," says Health Commissioner Ritchie in discussing the matter with an American reporter. "We go to one house and find that there are people sleeping in the kitchen. We order them out. What is the result. They take down the fresh air transom and close the door and refuse to open it. Hardly have we left the house when they are put up again and they are occupied the same as before.

Property Owners Blamed.

"We have some congestion in Boston, and it is due to several reasons. One of them is the fact that we do not have enough inspectors to properly do the work. Another is the fact that many wealthy property owners do not exercise that betterment house property do not have pride enough in it, charitably or are not humanitarians enough to try and better conditions for those people who are compelled to live in them.

"The reporter has inspected a tenement house in the North End. I found living up in an attic room with his wife and six children, a man who had just become a father. I left word with the husband and six children that conditions called for improvement, but when he was notified the owner of the property, he was surprised. He said he would do better, he should better than about the matter. He owned the property and he would see to the trouble if ever sent word to him. He has satisfied to derive ten per cent profit on his property and let the tenants take care of it themselves as best they could. Although he has these wealthy owners put this class of people in filthy conditions inspectors confronted with strenuous objections. They may resort to the courts, but that is an attempts to lay down the law with the board of health and inspectors often force some city official and attempt to use the political influence to save them from going to the expense of fixing up the property. Conditions in some of the tenement houses are disgraceful. One would have to [illegible] of it unless a personal investigation was made.

"We manage to have every tenement house inspected at least twice a year, and we are constantly inspecting lodging houses," Commissioner North said, "but we really require a much larger number of inspectors. For example, one of our inspectors goes to a [illegible] in the North End. He finds people sleeping in the cellars. [illegible] too many such cases. It is our duty to [illegible] them conform to the law, but if he drives around a week later he finds that they have gone back to the old conditions.

Call For Better Buildings.

"The best remedy of all is to have decent houses erected in the crowded sections. On the whole, I think that our tenements are not the worst in the country. In the matter of the overcrowding of tenements I don't [illegible] as suggested.

Chief Sanitary Inspector Jordan makes a special study of this problem and has charge of the force of sanitary inspectors of the health department. "I am absolutely safe in saying that conditions in Boston do not begin to compare with those in New York," he said. "In the first place, the lots upon which most of the tenement buildings are put are deep and consequently there are not so many houses without windows or where there is little or no fresh air. There are very few rooms of this kind in Boston. In New York I have found whole families living in rooms and nothing like that we have in Boston could begin to compare with it."

In describing how the tenement house districts form "hotbeds of infection" he said: "We do all of our inspection of these places at night, when the full extent of the can usually be found at home. We work from 9 p. m. to 1 a. m., and then we can find the true conditions. Take, for example, the block bounded by Salem, Leverett, Merrimac and Causton streets. In the West End we have also inspected the 2nd tenements, 138 dwelling houses, 22 one-family and 6 [illegible] houses and about 100 miscellaneous structures. We found 14,000 adults housed in the district and 1,911 children. There were 31 cases of over crowding. That is not an alarming table for a congested district is the block bounded by Prince, Hanover, Richmond and Fulton [illegible] streets. We inspected there last month, 373 dwellings, 1,062 tenements, 43 one-family and 4 two-family houses and about 200 more miscellaneous structures. We found 4,385 adult occupants and 2,200 child occupants. In 41 tenements we made complaints regarding crowded conditions. We will furnish a fair idea of the congestion in Boston [illegible] fact that in the [illegible] area of equal size are so many people housed.

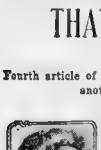
"I have made a study of these conditions in New York and there is no comparing that conditions are much worse there. Boston is [illegible]

MARY MEYER TELLS ABOUT DEMOCRATS' SILVER BATTLE THAT MADE BRYAN LEADER

By MARY T. MEYER.

Fourth article of a series specially written for the Sunday American, another of which will appear next Sunday.

Copyright, 1910, by Mary T. Meyer.



MARY MEYER.

THE inaugural of Josiah Quincy in 1896 was quite an event. It came after backing the third Quincy to be nominated as Mayor of this city. He was also the first Mayor elected for two years. Everything ended up in a row, but, quite a few of the boys were duly placed in good positions after a year of tough sledding. More men were discharged by Wheeler, superintendent of streets under Curtis, than by any of his predecessors. I have a good reason in my mind which was the result of the campaign of 1895 committee meetings and the election of a Mayor of the "right men" in positions. And the other way, always be a problem, whether we have party government in the city or non partisan government.

This was a year that a lot of work had to be done. The general merchants under the new city charter had to be elected before the election, and this necessitated a tremendous amount of work for me. All naturalized citizens had to have their naturalization papers to register, many of them had either lost or destroyed them, and copies had to be obtained, and for those who had been naturalized in other cities and States and had lost their papers, it had to be found out and copied. It was a gigantic task, but we worked all hour, succeeded in registering more than was ever on the list before.

Judge Corbett of Charlestown was president of the committee that year and he deserves great credit for the way he organized the boys to do out the Republican attempt to make Boston a Republican city. The national convention was to be held in Chicago in July, preparations were being made for that.

As I said in the preceding story, the silver element was getting very strong. During the debate in Congress on August 11, 1893, Richard P. Bland of Missouri in his famous "battle of the wabs" speech laid down the gauntlet to the gold Democrats. The last sentence of this famous speech practically sounded the death knell of the old Democratic party. It was as follows:

"I do not pretend to speak for anybody but myself and my constituents, but I believe that I do speak for the great masses of the great Mississippi valley when I say that we will not submit to the domination of any political party, however much we may love it, that lays its sacrificing hand upon silver and will demonetize it in the country."

BEGINNING OF THE FIGHT FOR SILVER.

In March, 1895, the silver men seemed to have many of those who got [illegible] and Why. The trip was rather [illegible] meeting of any great importance. I only remember one in which the silver men [illegible] Mahon, who was feeling very [illegible] Mahon was a strong sticker for Jerry O'Neill [illegible] Jerry O'Neill [illegible] Mahon [illegible] Democratic State committee. The Irony part was after [illegible] Mahon by his calling Mayor [illegible] Russell to Washington as the orator of the [illegible] meeting.

We reached Chicago Sunday night and [illegible] the Globe Well known near the [illegible] Auditorium. Which name [illegible] It looks to me.

The first days of the convention were [illegible] the several committees. Thursday, July 9, was the first time that the [illegible] down to business. It was [illegible] the convention really organized [illegible] temporary chairman, [illegible] Senator Daniel of Virginia defeating Dodd [illegible] Hill, who is generally classed [illegible] convention was controlled by the silver element. The convention came in the next day at 10 A. M., and then took a recess. After recess the convention was called to order by Senator Wolcott of California who immediately handed over the gavel to Hepburn [illegible] Iowa, and Congressman Wilson [illegible] Virginia, and by agreement between the candidates nominating and seconding speeches would be limited to thirty minutes.

Vest Used Poetry.

Senator Vest of Missouri, scarcely five feet in height, ascended the platform before the States had got further in the [illegible] Arkansas. The voice of the Missouri senator was not strong, but was quite lost in the vast hall, which was about one acre in area. I sat on the platform close to him, and it was with considerable difficulty that I could hear [illegible] Vest's address was followed by [illegible] in appreciation, and which was [illegible] down the noise until [illegible] trying to get into the hall [illegible] well the closing of Senator Vest's speech I was taking notes of [illegible] It was a rousing one and as follows:

Turn us Silver Dick,
And silver quick,
And we will make McKinley sick

This he got down the house. At this [illegible] and Bloody Bill Bland and Bland banners were unrolled [illegible] some of the unenthusiastic [illegible] Free Silver. Free People. One Girl One [illegible] One Bland, Bland, Silver [illegible] Irrepressible. Irrepressible [illegible]

David Overmeyer of Kansas and Hon. J. [illegible] chair of Illinois were called to the platform [illegible] When Georgia was called it [illegible] Hon. Thomas E. Watson of Georgia [illegible] Watson of Nebraska. The [illegible] was not quite so loud as Bland's. Theodore F. Rhett of North Carolina, George Fred Williams of Massachusetts, Hon. Thomas J. Keenan of Louisiana, seconded Bryan's nomination.

[illegible] I overheard from the women on the platform [illegible] I knew that Fred Williams would close the debate for the silver men. And in [illegible] who think that the women don't know anything about politics [illegible] say that they are not interested, I will tell you, Senator was talking [illegible] said rules of debate, when [illegible] and in fact both a good one on every [illegible] reading to no doubt [illegible] and I [illegible] plea [illegible] faith in William J. Bryan's ability to turn the [illegible] and from what I heard the women I was sure that Bryan was picked by the silver men to offset any harm that Russell might do.

Objection to Russell.

When Massachusetts was called and John W. Corcoran had told the convention that the State had no one to place in nomination, he gave his time to William F. Russell. Russell was received very well. One of the most conspicuous things that I ever witnessed was when Jerry O'Sullivan objected to Russell's being in the convention, he not being a duly elected delegate. The Massachusetts delegation was right near the platform, and when O'Sullivan raised his objection it looked to me as though there was going to be trouble in the delegation. I saw Patrick Maguire get up from his seat and walk over to the platform [illegible] George Fred Williams's face, but trouble was averted and everything [illegible] right. Russell delivered his speech, which [illegible] excellent speech, and was very well received. Bryan followed Russell. What [illegible] my personal opinion of Bryan's political principles is can not change my opinion of him as an orator. His speech was replete with glowing figures. He is definitely a business man, and in fact every word seemed to be inspired. Seated not far within arm's reach of him, I could see that [illegible] audience of supposed the best oratory of the United States responding to every point in his speech. They were as though under a spell, even the faces of the [illegible] showing signs of approval. His peroration was beautiful. The last sentence was a masterpiece.

"You shall not press down upon the brow of labor this crown of thorns, you shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold."

That concourse of humanity rose as if by magic, hugged one another, threw their hats in the air, in fact [illegible] went wild. The scene is beyond my ability to describe. It lasted fully forty minutes.

There was no doubt of Bryan's nomination. I really felt sorry for the New York and Massachusetts delegations. They fought to the last ditch. The resolutions recommending the Cleveland administration were voted down by a strict "line-up vote." Well, the platform was adopted and the vote came on the President. On the fifth ballot Bryan was nominated, as was expected, after his speech. Sewall of Maine was nominated for Vice-President.

The campaign of 1896 was one of the most interesting campaigns fought in this country.

HARVARD CAPTURES MANY POINTS AT MEDFORD

WIth some of the best athletes in New England competing and the pick from Harvard, the annual track meeting of the Lawrence Light Guards at the Medford Armory was a big success.

The Crimson runners took a big share of the prizes, figuring largely in the hand-cap events.

Austin captured the first prize for the Harvard by leading the bunch in the 75-yard dash from the five-foot mark. It took sixteen trial heats to sift out the runners, only winners qualifying for the semi-final round. Erne Nelson, the B. A. A. crack, the only scratch man, won his heat but could not get enough to the finals, while Wm. Coe, one of Tufts, pulled up lame.

Holland, the Brockton boy, won one of the mile run handicaps, while Howe, Amateur of Tufts, took another.

The Newton Y. M. C. A. team added a few more victories by trimming the Boston B. C. of Worcester.

Bill Coe, the B. A. A. shot putter, made an attempt to break the 12-pound record made by Horner, the Michigan athlete, at the B. A. A. meet recently, but the shot fell half an inch short of 8 pounds.

The long list of relay races took up a big part of the program. The Boston A. A. Athletic Association team, had little trouble beating the All New England combination made up of some of the best local men. M. I. T. disposed of Tufts in a two-mile contest and the Harvard distance men ran away with the Brookline Gym quartet.

The most exciting race came between rivals, Malden and Medford High. Medford won by a yard, the first time .. four years, in the final contest.

CRITICS DISCUSS FIGHT

with ... rounds and a half, it stayed twenty rounds with ... Another for Jeff.

On the other fisticuffs, which each was not there is no real line, Johnson fought Hart, and, but it wasn't the same Hits twice whipped Jr. Jeffries. Both men fought Jack Johnson fought him twice and twice knocked him out, in four rounds each time. Jeff did the trick in one route Both men fought Munroe, but Munroe claimed he figured the match as "doing business" and he'd agreed to allow the other to stay the full round limit.

Here is a sort of a summary: The men fought eight battles with six common antagonists, Griffin, Everett, Kennedy, Munroe, Fitzsimmons and Choynski.

Of Johnson's eight battles, he won two by knockouts, one was stopped to prevent a knockout, he won one decision, fought two draws, went six rounds to a no-decision affair and was once knocked out himself.

Of Jeff's eight battles, seven he won, four being knockouts, two were stopped to prevent knockouts and only one "decision" was the hollow one registered against Griffin in the exhibition; the eighth was the Choynski draw.

On the level of stuff, a blind man can see at a glance that Jeff, the comer and Jeff in his prime, overmatched Johnson against any one of the six men who were comers a antagonists. And that brings us right back again to the same old question: how good is Jeffries today? And that's what nobody knows to a certainty.

Naughton Says Jeff Is the "Younger Man"

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 19.—To the writer one of the surest signs of the widespread interest taken in the Jeffries-Johnson matter is the increase in the size of the afternoon mail. I am in daily receipt of a number of communications bearing upon different phases of the championship battle.

Many of the letters are not worth the paper they are written on. They are of a venomous partisan character, and they are highly interesting and one at least, which arrived a few days ago, contained a valuable suggestion.

Of a certainty, "Constant Reader" and "Fair Play" are extremely alert just now and woe betide the critic who slurs over anything or is adjudged guilty of faulty reasoning.

The letter I make special reference to is from Las Cruces, Mexico. After working off a compliment or two which modesty prevents repetition of, the correspondent says:

Asks Many Questions.

"There is one point connected with all this pro and con talk which I have never heard discussed and I bring it to your attention, hoping you will touch upon it in one of your Sunday talks.

"Suppose Jeffries's retirement have worked to his advantage, since he has been out of training and off his feed a period of rest? While Jeffries is a couple of years younger than Johnson, he is not a younger man from a fighting standpoint, and hasn't Johnson been in active fighting for more than Jeffries—and shouldn't Jeffries be taken as the younger man of the two? He can start in fighting later in life if in the interest great enough, and he had more than a year's rest. Is it not one a fact that the prime of life of the boxer is between the ages of the 24 and 27?

"It would seem that it would look as though Johnson should be getting stale, and Jeffries, providing he could get into condition, becoming stronger and more constant demand and losing some of their physical vitality. In better physical condition and with more experience Jeffries may prove during his retirement than has the boxer."

While the correspondent indulges in from out one of the interrogation point, it seems to me that there is a lot of logic to the question on one phase of the Jeffries-Johnson affair. It is one that will set any intelligent reader who is the possessor of a modicum of psychology to work on the answers to the queries propounded in the letter. Johnson and Jeffries are both in the prime of manhood and athletic perfection. Johnson has been constantly in active training and fighting. Jeffries has come back after remaining the record, some people will begin to wonder how Jeffries ever "won away."

Younger in Fight Game.

Now, to begin with, there is one little particular on which the gentleman in Mexico is misinformed, judging from his question. Jeffries did not start in fighting later in life than the colored gentleman." If the record is a criterion, Jeffries was only twenty-one when he began battling, whereas Johnson was twenty-three when he first smelled resin.

To attempt answering some of the man in Mexico's questions would be merely to furnish opinions. There are a few in which, however, where one can employ figures, as, for instance, when he asks, "while Jeffries is a couple of years older than Johnson, is he not a younger man from a fighting standpoint?"

Jeffries certainly is. Jeffries was in the ring for eight years and Johnson has had only seven. Five the turmoil of fighting game.

Then again he asks: "Hasn't Johnson been in active training longer than Jeffries and shouldn't Jeffries be classed as the younger of the two?"

This is a theory one, but figures will come to the aid of those wishing to form an opinion favorable to Jeffries. Jeffries in his whole career fought but twenty-one times, whereas Johnson has been in action seventy times at least. Now, among old fighters and conditioners I've met a favorable argument that much training and relishing make the men of the ring old before their time. It is assuming that Johnson has suffered for the paucity of his fights, he has certainly experienced more wear and tear from the ring and out of it than has Jeffries

Not Like Corbett-Sullivan.

The argument that the physical life of the Saxon is longer than that of the Esbo is unconvincing. I will generally side step. In a general way I might say that the negro race doesn't appear to be dying out. Bert Williams, Sam Lucas and the Mexico spoken of a "physical life" be meaning the life of the individual or the race, which keeps a fighter on top of the heap? Jeffries certainly has the best of it in the Jeffries-Johnson fight is not a May and December proposition, as was the Corbett-Sullivan affair. Jeffries was thirty before fought eight years and then only waited four years. Johnson commenced fighting at 15 thirty two, has been at it nine years and is now 33. It is for you to figure out.

Thinking over these matters the Mexican correspondent has given me reason to go a hard one to answer. Here is what he asked:

Should not Jeffries retirement have worked out to his advantage, since he is to been out of training and it has been a period of rest?

BRAE-BURN WINS OVER PROVIDENCE

Local Ice Hockey Team Turns Tables on Visiting Aggregation by Big Score.

It was big revenge Brae Burn took out of the Providence A. C. ice hockey team at the Newton Rink Friday evening, defeating the visitors by the one sided score of 8 to 3. Not many weeks ago Brae Burn was rolled on the ice by a topsiding result.

The Country Club players got together in great shape on this occasion and were out to win. Getting the jump on the Providence team was the secret of the victory. Before the visiting seven knew there was a game, Brae Burn had tabulated three goals and with the lead once in their favor there was no chance to beat them.

The whole Budlong family of athletes played on Providence, but it availed them nothing against the remarkable combination tactics of the Brae Burn backfield. Knowles and D. Morley were the stars on the home combination and were always in the limelight of the fray. The Providence forwards could do nothing with the defense of Lodge, long, who got the only tally that saved the day of town team a whitewash. The summary:

BRAE BURN.	PROVIDENCE.

BALDWIN TO BATTLE WITH RAY BRONSON

Great Slugfest Expected When Lightweight Scrappers Get in Ring at Armory A. A.

There isn't any doubt of the bout between Matty Baldwin and Ray Bronson, the Indian lightweight, being as rugged as the fans could wish for when they meet in a twelve round combat at the Armory A. A. on Tuesday night.

Bronson is a regular bearcat when it comes to aggressiveness. He showed that when he bested Dave Deshler a couple of times and easily held his strength the whole distance with Deshler who seemed to add power to travel such a hot pace.

On the other hand Matty Baldwin fought a twenty-round draw at New Orleans a good evidence that there is very little difference between them in both ability. Now that they are travelling twelve rounds it's a cinch that they will go about twice as fast.

Both boys are anxious to wipe out that even snilt in the South, which left the result of who is the better fighter in doubt, and will show all they have got in the mixing line in order to settle the decision his way on this occasion.

Referee Wolgast Dave Nelson battle will take place in the afternoon so the crowd can return will be assured to have been here. The preliminaries arranged are by Jack Dempsey Young Lincoln of Haverhill, Jimmy Mikell, champion Middleweight, meets Billy Young, both from Georgia Alger of Cambridge has Ralph Wells of Lynn booked to go.

HAL CHASE TELLS HOW FIRST BASE POSITION SHOULD BE PLAYED

By HAL CHASE,

First Baseman of the New York Americans, and Acknowledged to be One of the Greatest Ball Players Who Ever Pulled on a Spiked Shoe.

The all first base position offers better opportunities in baseball to-day than any other. Fewer real experts are playing the initial sack than any other position on the diamond. In the old days hitting ability was the first essential of success. First basemen generally were big men. They were selected solely as targets for the rest of the infielders. They covered little ground. To-day it is different. A first baseman is not only expected to get all sorts of throws, but to cover as much ground as the rest of the infield. Unless he can hoof up this end he is practically useless.

I have played every position on the infield and outfield. I broke into the game as a semi-pitcher. What base, however, he may specialize on, it is well to learn all the positions. It may help some day to get a job and help your way to success. There is nothing rocky road of success. There is nothing so absolutely necessary as beginning properly.

Must Possess Long Reach.

A first baseman should be possessed of better than average reach. He has to handle wide as well as high throws. He must be agile. He must be accurate in throwing and as accurate in timing and receiving throws. And he must possess that activity and nimbleness that will protect him from collision with base runners.

A throw to the inside of the ling I generally play by keeping my right foot on the sack and my body as far out in foul territory as possible. I use this foot for the outside throw. In this way I make skate quickly on a position best suited for protection in case of collision.

Play Deep for Slow Men.

The territory covered depends on a fielder's speed to a great extent. But speed must be backed by ability to size up a situation quickly and correctly by instinct. It is the player who gets away to a fast start who makes the most of the stuff that comes. For a slow man I play deeper. There are some men in the American League for whom I can run out almost to right field without danger. Many times I have seen a batted ball that looked sure to be a hit retire they were so far back. But the rest of such a stand pat. But the point is, the more that the deeper you play the more chance you have to get a ball that looks sure.

Play as deeply as possible at all times, and not run in to field a ball. Trying to your station for any sort of a throw to home so no one else handles the ball.

Study how the fielding end of it runs naturally. Learn to field a ball so that the throwing throws. But no two infielders throw the same way. Gleason had the smallest I ever handled. On close plays when he had to hurry he unstiffen his arm sometimes on every ball. He would break in a corner as it came. He always threw it would speed it on and on again and shoot out. That, of course, calls for extreme quickness on the part of the receiver. I remember once one of Gleason's throws broke like a boomerang. It fell away so sharply and suddenly that it hit me on the wrist.

Whether or not the most important, the first baseman is but one part of a machine. Each player must do his part thoroughly understand his fellows. It is for this reason that I favor a system of training not only to the club using them, are used. Every man has to learn the duties of all the pitcher will deliver the ball, the catcher so that he may throw to the second base to which, a fly is likely to fall, the infielder so that he may shift and "back up" on every ball. In short, he must learn the positions with all things that may occur. But the first baseman has many calls forth strategy helps to cope with the unexpected.

There are no set rules for playing any one else. No two batters will bat exactly the same way. Right hand batters have a tendency to hit toward left field and right fields, but there are so many exceptions as almost to disprove the rule. Many batters are players like Willie Keeler who seldom hit twice in the same direction. These will pull the ball almost any way, even when you have played them for a base hit you have to a wallop in a twinkle. For this reason one must study every peculiarity of every batter.

The first baseman's duties are many. He is the most responsible for his opponent reaching his station. Until he gets to first a player is harmless. In addition the first baseman must beat every ball in accurate throwing to second and to bag up of throwing to others. He must be alert to combine with the pitcher in catching a runner off his line. If it is easier to do this at first than at any other base.

As the great majority of outs happen at first base, the guardian of the pillow must be a flatshed fielder. The first baseman is often exposed to danger. To a left handed first baseman the danger is naturally greater. A throw to the inside of the ling—that is, between the base and the runner—naturally draws the fielder into the danger zone. A right handed fielder, with his glove in the left hand, can reach and play the ball from the left off the runner without endangering his own safety. Harry Davis, one of the best hitter, at his best, was perhaps the most skilled at this trick. With if he had pocketed the ball without any part of the ball with his left hand or foot he was as good as planting himself in the middle, any way he chose, and making a safe putout himself. To do this is to be ready to be able to shift either foot quickly.

I believe a left handed first baseman is better fitted for the position than a right-hander for the reason that he has less throwing. This makes a snap throw to second or third much easier. He naturally faces these bags. The right hander has to run round, losing valuable time. In throwing to the plate, there is no advantage in either case. Where the latter will come when a right-handed first baseman will be inclined to run on a left batted third base not now is. Fred Tenney was the pioneer umpires. He was a scholar. He originated the sacrifice killing play. That was the base to him he tried for the man that was to be advanced. I did the same thing before I heard of Tenney. It was in 1905, on a day I was in a jam for the plate with the bases full and none out in a fast fight. Dander. I gave up a wild throw. I could see no sure out. I knew that an attempt to get the man at the plate would be a dead certainty.

Every Diamond Different.

A ground ball or throw will bound differently to you almost every day. A ball on a diamond is naturally lively. A muddy, wet infield is dead. On the first a ball will bounce like rubber. On the latter it will stop or lag on the ground. For this reason no infielder should shirk practice. Many players become too used to the peculiarities of the ground which they cover.

Now, as to a few tricks that will help the first baseman after he has mastered the position. The left-handed batter sacrifice bunt either is about the most important. Many players attempt to make one every team mate knows your purpose. Look at the start of the play. The player will instantly tip his hand if he intends to cross you. If he does not, he will stop short. That will give you a better chance to go over to either side for the grounder.

A snap throw to second or third, following a play at first, will often get a man running ahead of the batter. As first is the only base which it is possible to overrun, a player on a close appeal, will often be unable to pull up short at second or third. Especially is this true when he finds he is not drawing the throw. In this case he does not have to slide. The umpire carries him across the sack if he has to hustle to get his station. A second baseman or shortstop who covers can often put the ball on him before he can get back.

THIS is the first of a series of articles on baseball written exclusively for the American by Hal Chase. The peerless first baseman of the New York American League Club in his first installment deals with the art of guarding the initial sack. Chase is universally regarded as the greatest player of all time at the position. Surely, so far as fielding is concerned, no one has ever ventured to choose his equal on the diamond. Chase makes the hardest plays appear so easy that in a way his great feats have ceased to be a marvel to New York fandom. In other cities, however, as many fans turn out to see Chase alone perform as are attracted to the games.

HASTE THEE, NYMPH!

By HEK.

Sick and tired of winter's grind—
Wars we'll to would leave behind,
Book on Fall for and Grand
Racing hours a at something nods,
Accusations, threats, tirades,
Tonsured cornering trades;
Double crosses, times and tic tie,
Steals and at run scoring;
Fearsome twaddle, seasons guff—
Stow it! We've had quite enough
Come, sweet nymph of the sport,
Chase these nightmares that distort
Our best thoughts and spoil our aim;
Twice and 3 to PLAY the game
Haste thee, Nymph, and bring thee back
Popcorn, rye and crackerjack,
Nuts and beers and wrestled smiles,
Quips and cranks and wanton wiles,
Rich as bags on County's cheek
And lure to live in dimple sleek;
Sport that wrinkled care derides
And Laughter holding both his sides—
Come and trip it as ye run,
Come ye, light fantastic fun!

GUESS THERE'S SOME CLASS TO IT.

That schedule the American League handed out a few days ago? That's one of the surest signs there is that the base ball season isn't very far off, and when the signs are just where the teams are going to play, they begin to get that fever stronger and than some. Yes, verily, when that schedule appears the fans take a day off and figure. First the Senators, then the Athletics with old Connie Mack, Kid Collins, Baker and that bunch. Gee, that's swell!"

Thousands of fans went through this same thing when they got the copy of the American League campaign for the season of 1910.

The Red Sox, same as last year, don't open at home. But all the teams can have the opening dates at home, and the Red Sox won't be found kicking. However, the Boston boys won't have to wait long to see the Sox in action, for Patsy Donovan and his crew are due to come hooting from New York, where they open on April 14 with the Highlanders, and on April 18, four days after the start of the season, they will show at the Huntington Avenue Grounds with the Senators. The four days the team will be over in New York will just serve to get the appetite of the boys sharpened up, and then, Holy Smokes, when the Red Sox opens here, what a mob there'll be on hand to greet them.

It is about a 1 to 3 shot that there will be a goodly gathering of the rabid ones at the grounds to view the men in morning practice if Manager Donovan allows his men the little workout.

Monday afternoon, April 18, the Sox will tackle the Senators, with our old side kick, Doc Gessler, in the lineup. The Senators will be under their new manager, Jimmie McAleer, and while they are not the best team in the league and do not show as large crowds as some other teams they always put up a good showing and keep things full of life.

The Sox stay at home until April 26, playing the Athletics after they get through with the Washington squad. Then they leave and take to the Washington road, where they meet the Senators again. Philadelphia then comes in for a raid by the Boston warriors, and on May 3 they are at home again and stay until May 31, which is certainly one nice, long home series. During this stay they entertain the New York, St. Louis, Detroit, Chicago, Cleveland and Philadelphia teams in order.

There'll be some big doings on May 14 when the Tigers make their first appearance of the season at the Red Sox park. The fans don't forget the series with the Tigers last season, when those attendance records were smashed and when the Red Sox took a brace and helped the Tiger band on its little stump. The bugs want some more of the same playing they saw last year. At the end of this home stay the Red Sox will have met the teams in the American League and then the fans can have a fair chance of picking the winner of the Lunting.

The Red Sox have no kick coming on the distribution of the holiday dates, as they have three nice ones on which to show in this city. The day after the Red Sox make the first appearance in this city the fans have a holiday on which to see them perform April 19, Patriots' Day, is the holiday, and the Washington Senators will be the Sox's opponents.

The next holiday the Taylorites have at home comes on Memorial Day, May 30. Connie Mack's bunch will be visiting here then and will play two games, one in the morning and the other in the afternoon, as is the rule on holidays. September 5 is the last holiday in which the Red Sox will be seen in Boston, and two games will be played with the Washington Club on that day.

INTELLIGENT CRITICISM ON EVERY.

thing I write in this column is always welcome and the intelligence of the following letter almost overwhelms me. Now that Mr. Tom Sullivan of Lowell has me right I will be able to sleep soundly again. Of course, it will be news to a lot of people that Sullivan fought Mahey, Godfrey, Dempsey and Peter Jackson, but far be it from me to presume to differ with a man of such evident wisdom as Mr. Tom Sullivan. He names six "champions" that John L. licked, and the old kindster really did fight one of them, but I don't know of who he means by Mahey. I'm going to slip Mr. Sullivan's letter along to Arthur Duffy. I know he will want to have it framed as a work of art. Read the letter, and bear in mind the big shade you all have on me. You don't have to send my stuff, but I'm paid a salary for reading literary efforts like this:

Straight Dope:

Although my time is very valuable to my self I am going to waste a few minutes of it by telling you something a know nothing about.

That is I am going to tell you something of John L. Sullivan's career overseas.

When Sullivan met any eighteen years old who was middling and licked only them, he always said he was the champion of the world, but when he met some who knew how to hand a lot of either nose all chambers of different colors, I will just put down a few names: Peter Maher, Jack Dempsey, John Ryan, Mahey, Goodfrey, Peter Jackson, besides a host of others.

If you will take the time and read history you know all these named were champions. He was the only French champion who ever licked Sullivan, a man who had a record for only twenty-four hours. And the Frenchman was a good deal better than he was. And the Frenchman was a good deal better than he was. And the Frenchman was a good deal better than he was

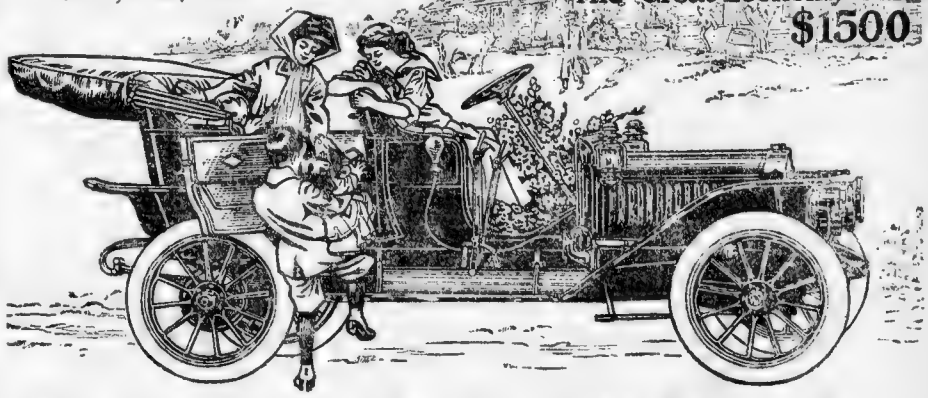
"Here is a 'Big Car' the wealthiest man will be proud to own—and the man of moderate means can afford to maintain."

Benj. Briscoe PREST.

"Maxwell"

The "Great Economy Car"

$1500



"This Big Car Can Be Run 5,000 Miles a Year At An Average Total Cost of $3.98 a Week"

Here is a Big, 4-cylinder, 30-H. P., Five-Passenger Touring Car that will interest thousands of men who have always considered an automobile beyond their means—not because they couldn't afford to buy one, but because they have felt they couldn't afford the cost of maintaining one. It is a fact that the expensive "upkeep" of most automobiles has put them beyond the reach of men with moderate incomes. Not so with the Maxwell. Our cars have always been the most economical to run, as over 21,800 Maxwell owners have proved.

Now we are satisfied that in our new 4-Cylinder, 30-H. P. Touring Car we have the "Great Economy Car." In proof, we give you the actual figures, showing for how little this car can be run. This is what every man wants to know about a car—how much it actually costs to run. And this is just what you don't find out about other automobiles—before you buy them.

Figures Based on Facts

When we tell you that this big, handsome Maxwell Touring Car can be run 5,000 miles a year at an average total cost of $3.98 a week (or $207.02 a year) we are not theorizing. These figures include the total cost of the gasoline, oil and grease required to run this car 5,000 miles; the cost of punctures; the cost of two extra tires complete (which may not be needed), and the cost of repairs. Experience shows this to be a correct average established by Maxwell owners. How can we better show the low cost of keeping a Maxwell than by giving in dollars and cents just what 5,000 miles of motoring cost this owner? Read this letter—one of the hundreds we receive unsolicited:

I have driven my car 5,000 miles by the odometer, covering approximately 100 miles a week. My experience has convinced me that my car can be run 5,000 miles a year at an average total cost of $207.02.

Gasoline, 357 gallons	$10.20
Oil, half bbl.	15.60
Grease, 10 lbs.	2.60
Punctures, seven	3.50
Repairs	7.40
Two extra tires, complete	113.86
	$207.02

"My running cost has actually been less than the above figures, because at the beginning of the season I bought a set of tires and tubes. As a matter of fact, but one of these has been used. The last two cars, or per week running everything, but $3.65. K. L. CALKINS"

Note—For simile of the above letters sent on request

Cheaper for Touring than a Trolley

As the above figures show, the average cost per week is but $3.98 to run this big Maxwell 100 miles—thus making the total running cost per mile less than four cents or less than one cent per passenger! This means you can take a family of five for an outing in this car at less expense than you could take them by trolley. To take five people for a trolley ride twenty miles out and back would cost at least twenty cents per person each way, a total of $2.00. Five people can make this round trip in this big Maxwell Touring Car at a total cost of $1.60. Surprising as this statement seems, it is true, and we have included it here to furnish you with a striking example of the practical advantages of our "Great Economy Car."

We Help Maxwell Owners

Proper care is of vital importance in keeping down the cost of maintenance in any car. More automobiles are ruined by misuse than in any other way. We publish regularly a seven-monthly magazine for Maxwell owners to show them how to run their cars as economically as possible. To run the Maxwell at the low cost above stated one must run it with proper care. We do not guarantee to do everyone we sell a Maxwell at the above stated cost—it is an average. But many owners exceed even better. Moreover, these figures, of course, do not show the unusual reduction in value from year to year—which every automobile undergoes—but is remarkably low in Maxwell cars.

A Car You'll Be Proud of

Don't imagine because this car has such a remarkably low running cost that its economy is apparent in its appearance. On the contrary, it is a car identical in general appearance and size with cars which cost more than twice its price. Three people can sit easily in its roomy, comfortable tonneau. It is a big car in everything but excessive weight, and that is one secret of its great economy. It has a long wheel-base (110 inches) and big wheels and tires (34x4). It is generously equipped with three oil lamps, two gas lights, generator, magneto, horn and tools—over $150 worth of extras. When we sell you this car it is ready for the road. There are no extras that you have to buy. No amount of description, no picture, can so much impress you with its size and elegance as the sight of it. Go to your Maxwell dealer and see it. Compare it with the most expensive automobiles and judge for yourself.

These Books Free

We want to send without cost to you copies of our magazine, "The Co-Operator," and "How to Judge an Automobile," a practical treatise on motor cars. Also our latest catalog, together with other interesting booklets of facts. One of these gives the details of the 10,000-mile run made by a Maxwell last year, without stopping its engine. This is a world's record that has never been equalled by any car at any price. Please fill out attached coupon with your name and address. These books will be sent by return mail without cost to you.

We hope we have aroused your interest in the Maxwell so that you will start to learn more about it; so that you will send coupon for our literature, go to the nearest Maxwell dealer, whose name we will send you, and see the car; meet Maxwell owners and learn from them what they have found out about Maxwell automobiles from actual experience. Then—when you have fully satisfied yourself as to our reliability, and that of our cars—we would like to sell you this "Great Economy Car," help you to take good care of it, and enable you to enjoy the pleasure, convenience, comfort and all the advantages of owning a first-class automobile.

POPULAR RECIPE

This Home-Made Cough Syrup Stops Coughs Quickly.

Make a plain syrup by taking one pint of Granulated Sugar, add one half pint of warm water and stir for two minutes. Put two and one-half ounces of Pure Pinex, in a pint bottle and fill it up with the Granulated Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. Keep well corked and will be found

The effectiveness of this home-made article is due to the fact that it promptly stops a dry, hacking cough in twenty-four hours. It is also a splendid remedy for colds, whooping cough, bronchitis, and other throat troubles.

Use the real Pinex, however. It is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway White Pine Extract and is far superior to the numerous substitutes and pine tar preparations. Any druggist in the United States or Canada will supply you without trouble.

The proportion above gives almost a full pint of the best cough and cough remedy. Its taste is pleasant that children take it willingly. The total cost is about 54 cents.

Strained Honey may be used instead of the syrup and makes a very fine Honey and Pine Tar cough syrup.

Mexico Through Saner Eyes

Stop a bit!

Let's look on the other side.

Mexico, our Southern sister-land, is not nearly as "dark-complected" as recent magazine articles have pictured her.

If you want the facts, as we did, you'll find that the good and the evil, the lion and the lamb, lie down together there, just as they do nearer home.

We were not quite ready to believe that Mexico is a more than Weyler-like inferno. So we sent Mr. Otheman Stevens down there, with unmistakable instructions to eschew both whitewash and red-fire. His first article, Mexico---the Progressive, appears in the current number---now on all the news-stands.

We are more pleased than we can tell you to find that he has so evidently looked through clear, sane eyes---eyes that see everything, but rejoice in the many remarkable evidences of progress and promise in Diaz-land, instead of gloating over its less pleasing transitional aspects.

Smart Set Queens Reign Undisturbed By Advent of Lent

Opera Is Leading Diversion, but Dances, Dinners, Dramatic Readings and House Parties Are Enjoyed, While New Sartorial Wonders Add Lustre to the Social Scene in Boston and New England.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

A CASUAL review of the smart set diversions of the past week and a cursory glance at those of the coming fortnight are amply sufficient to dispel all anxiety and fear on the part of the fashionable contingent remaining in town that the advent of Shrove Tuesday, Ash Wednesday or any other proverbially gloomy day in the period of sack cloth and ashes is likely to sound the knell of the customary gayety in the smart circles of the Hub.

Of course, almost all the plans of the leaders have been tempered and moderated, as if to show that they are not entirely oblivious to their position as the arbiters of the social world and as the consciences of their own exclusive sets, and while they are making pleasing and plausible pretense of practising the fine arts of self-renunciation, penance and expiation, not one of their devoted following is the least bit alarmed lest the threatened lull in affairs social is to become oppressive.

On the contrary, if any alarm were to be sounded in the quiet of the "inner shrine" these days, it would be on the score that there is to be absolutely no respite this year and that, according to the present prospect, the season-wearied must seek surcease on their own initiative and not trust to any lull in the doings of society in general.

Indeed, the first days of Lent and the forecast of the immediate future are entirely satisfactory and auspicious only to those fortunate spirits that either know no weariness or have had a few weeks of quiet in the country home, in the Southland or, perchance, have just flitted homeward from a peaceful sojourn in some restful European hamlet; for, however season-fagged matron or belle or "bud," what hope can there be of rest and quiet when the order of the weeks present such allurements as the opera, six dances, several sets of delightful dramatic readings, any number of musicales and recitals, a plethora of lectures, bridge parties, dinners, luncheons, teas and at homes—not to mention numerous smart receptions and a redeeming number of charity functions?

Opera Habit Is Growing.

That the "opera habit" is not listed among the Lenten denials of society during the passing penitential season is clearly demonstrated at each recurring performance in Boston's temple of opera. For each program is witnessed the same panorama, and as the days are visibly lengthening the sun god hardly disappears behind the towering spires of the Fenway groups of architectural monuments to religion, science and art ere the opera house windows commence to light up like twinkling stars as presumptious for the evening make urgent the early activities of sunglints and the indispensable supernumerai.

Within an incredibly short time, also, opera place and the Huntington avenue carriage drives commence to crowd, and as each turnout dashes up with its occupants, the women in ultimest toilettes, mantles and all enveloping luxuriance and the men so correct from top to toe, the cheery transportation attendants in their smart uniforms perform well their services.

Inside the foyer the real opera spirit asserts itself, with almost every one cordially greeting friend, relative, neighbor, as well as meeting of box guests—all to join in the happy reunions.

Creditable, indeed, to Bostonians is the favorable comment which has reached distant cities of the punctuality of opera devotees, and it is exceptional that even the box owners are tardy in putting in an appearance. This is very noticeable during the grand opera promenade, which is the pertinent social feature, for although the rhythmic conversational tones often rise almost to chatter, at the sound of the warning bell each little group politely disperses and the mahogany doors of the double horseshoe tiers close in as if by magic, the jubilant throngs leaving the foyer deserted and silent.

Loving kindness and charity are the natural accompaniments of the Lenten season, and while charity has ever formed the foundation for Lenten gatherings, the opera prompts the spirit of the former, for is it not extreme loving kindness which urges society circles so fondly to welcome and encourage the artists who have made such a notable mark of success? Each newcomer receives the same cordial welcome, and their sentiments express indignation that Bostonians should ever be accused of hauteur or coldness.

Miss De Freyne Is Entertained.

Among the latest artists to win approval is the dainty Fely De Freyne, who Monday night was quite generally entertained by prominent box hosts. With Mrs. Wallace Goodrich, whose husband conducted for De Freyne's premiere as Marguerite in "Faust, she made the first acquaintance in Boston society. She was daintily gowned in softest pink chiffon and wore a wondrous rope of pearls. Mrs. Goodrich appeared in black chiffon taffeta with jet studdings, and her gown was among the few one-note black dresses selected for Monday night.

It was no doubt a tribute to Cupid's patron saint, Valentine, that most of the women appeared in frilliest laces and general light effects. For the display of prevailing modes there is no better vantage point than the handsome circular foyer, with its central feature, the palm room, so homelike with its stately grand piano occupying one corner. By no means confined to box patrons is this popular room, and it is a pretty picture to see the happy parties of women and their escorts descending the grand stairways from the first balcon and loge tiers, for, let it be whispered, there is a perfection of grace about a woman who can gracefully move over a stairway in a handsome trailing gown, the artistry of which is easily determined by even the casual observer.

If the palm room is the mecca for the women, the smoking rooms afford solace to the large array of Boston men who retain interest in the opera as a social diversion. Thomas W. Lawson, who has missed but few of the new series of operas, is a notable figure in the smoking room.

Among the merry box parties for "La Boheme" was that of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Longyear, whose "cosy corner" box on the second horseshoe tier was filled throughout the evening. Their graceful daughter, Miss Helen, looked like a veritable "lady of the snow" as she entered, her long coat of ermine suggesting comfort for even the Arctic regions, where she may soon travel, as her father is one of the few Americans promoting industries in Spitsbergen. Miss Longyear's gown was in the Greek mode, bordered with pearl passementeries with a touch of silver. Her mother wore a parchment toned satin, with pleased ruffles and overbodice of Brussels lace.

Among the proud peres also was Chester Whitin Lasell, whose daughter, Hildegarde, was hostess of a large party of young people. She selected a gown of white satin with Antoinette overskirt of light blue knotted with pearl fringes just above the hem.

Mrs. Fearing Is Much Admired.

Mrs. George R. Fearing, Jr., presided most graciously in her box and was much admired in white satin with garniture of oxidised silver and crystals, which strikes the newest note in fashionable adornment. Her hair, severely coiffed, was in contrast to the fantastic bandeau of diamonds, coquettishly dangling at each ear.

Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer was in a gown of the new gray shade, which holds a tinge of violet. The lace tunic was trellised in vintage pattern, and she wore diamond combs.

One of the surprises of the fashion display was the gown worn by Mrs. H. Staples Potter, who has been heretofore partial to gold gowns, but for that night selected a cloth of silver with corsage pendants of pearls and silver, and colet ofcorals caught with diamond slides.

Extremely fetching was the gown worn by Miss Dorothy Jordan, who on Friday flitted from her natal city to the metropolis to favor society with her terpsichorean grace. She was gowned in white charmeuse, swathed in a cloudlike draper of moonlight green and bordered with swansdown. Her box guest, Mrs. Alfred Codman, was in effective contrast, wearing Persian blue panne velvet, martea trimmed, with cuff fur circlet of pearls.

Mrs. John L. Gardner was in black tulle flittered in silver paillettes, and as she departed to her carriage joined the party of Mrs. Horatio N. Slater, who was regal in Venetian lace and sables.

On the lower horseshoe, also, were Mrs. Stanley McCormick, who wore Nile green satin serenely fashioned, while her mother, Mrs. Stanley McCormick, was in mellonil blue satin.

Mrs. B. F. Cheney was handsome in yellow satin with lace at the cuirsage, and Miss Elizabeth Cheney wore light blue.

In the orchestra stalls were Mrs. Albert Nickerson and her daughter, Miss Ruth, who were easter-toned satin; Mrs. J. Rupat Blake, who was in decolette gown of pompadour silk; Mrs. L. G. De Bois, very handsome in lilac chiffon and jewelled corsage; Miss Amy Lowell, in blue satin and Irish lace scarfs; Mrs. Henry Tufter, stately in decolette gown of rose pink with inset border of rose appliques; Mrs. John T. Bottomley, wearing a smart gown of raspberry tinted chiffon.

Mrs. Theodore P. Haner, happy and smiling after her long trip in the Southland and continued to the Golden Gate of the Pacific, displayed a handsome gown of cafe au lait satin, with which she wore dainty bronze slippers and gold ornaments.

Mrs. Horatio Lamb was much sought by numerous friends, appearing in a lovely gown of blue brocade, pearl studded.

One of the small select dances to which the younger set is looking forward with pleasurable anticipation is that which Mr. and Mrs. Robert Slow Bradley have planned to give in honor of their daughter, Miss Leslie Bradley, at their residence on Commonwealth avenue, on Friday evening, March 4. It is the second dance this Winter that the Bradleys have arranged for their daughter, and this one, like that given earlier in the season, will be a small house affair. Miss Bradley made her debut last Winter, but as the family was in mourning, her coming out was not so brilliant as had been arranged and her relatives and friends are therefore making compensation to the young girl in the numerous smart affairs that they have been planning for her this Winter. Her dance will call out a representative number of the season's debutantes, as well as the older girls, and particularly those who made their debut last year.

Select Dances Will Be Features of the Future.

THERE are two small select dances to which the younger contingent are particularly interested and which are both to be given during the Lenten season. One is the smart house dance that Mr. and Mrs. John E. Thayer of Commonwealth avenue have planned for their daughter, Miss Nathalie Thayer, and the other is to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Baylies in honor of their son, Lincoln Baylies, and their daughter, Miss Charlotte Baylies. The dance will be given at their residence on Commonwealth avenue.

Smart entertainments for the children of the fashionable set are quite the order these weeks, and in addition to those already announced Mrs. Lorenzo Munson Wendelin is making arrangements for an afternoon with the children at which an interesting program is made up of selections from Mrs. Lara Anderson's recent book, "The Great Sea Horse," will be presented by the same concrete have been made with Mrs. Anderson in regard to the entertainment and she has given her approval. Mrs. Woodside has an enviable reputation for her clever entertainments for children, and the result of her efforts are keenly anticipated by the little people.

Mrs. Lester Noble Godfrey has cards out for a large luncheon, to be followed by bridge, for next Thursday afternoon at her residence on Beacon street. During the past week she gave a bridge party and tea at her home.

J. Gratton Minot has charge of the assignments for the dances to be given by the Cotillion Club, which will be the first of the series to be given in Boston. The dances will be held on Wednesday evenings, March 9, 16, 23 and 30, and the patronesses will be Mrs. Henry Lee Higginson, Mrs. Quincy A. BOSTON GIRLS WHO ARE SOCIETY FAVORITES AT THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

MISS JULIA MEYER

MISS ALICE MEYER

MISSES MEYER ADMIRED BY THE WASHINGTON SET

DURING the Winter season in Washington none of the younger members of the smart set have attracted more admiring attention and been more entertained in official and diplomatic circles than the two charming daughters of the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. George von L. Meyer, the Misses Julia and Alice Meyer. The Meyer girls are very well known in Boston, for they made their home on Beacon street until this Winter, when the family moved to Washington on account of the official position of Mr. Meyer.

Mrs. Meyer was Miss Alice Appleton before her marriage, and she is a sister of Mrs. Charles S. Tuckerman of this State road, whose daughter, Julia Tuckerman, recently became the bride of Louis Chapin of London, where the young bride is to make her home. Mrs. Meyer and her daughter, Miss Julia Meyer, attended the wedding in Boston and Miss Meyer was one of the attendants of the bride, her cousin.

Besides attending more smart society affairs at the Capital this Winter than perhaps any other of the younger set, the Meyer girls have the distinction of being leaders in the fashionable skating parties that are proving such a fascinating diversion for society during the Lenten period, and they are devoted to the sport, both on ice and on rollers. Their particular accomplishment is fancy skating on the ice, in which their father, the secretary, is also an adept and is frequently seen in company with his daughters. The Meyers have spent so much of their time abroad that they learned the fine art of fancy skating from their foreign cousins, who make the sport one of the chief diversions of the Winter months.

Quite the latest fad of the Washington belles, patrons and buds, is, however, roller skating, and during the past week they have decided to vary the usual program for Lent by forming a roller skating club and having frequent skating parties. The committee in charge of the affair is made up of Countess Moltke (Cornelia Thayer), wife of the Danish Minister and daughter of Nathaniel Thayer of Fairfield street, Mrs. John Story, Viscountess Beaudet d'Aay, wife of the naval attache of the French Embassy, and the Countess Lulse von Bernstorff, daughter of the German Ambassador. Miss Nicholas Longworth (Alice Roosevelt) is one of the younger matrons who is joining in the sport, and is indeed quite as enthusiastic over both kinds of skating as the Meyer girls.

Mrs. Thomas K. Laughlin of Pittsburg, sister of Mrs. William Howard Taft, is another who has joined the club and is proving to be one of the best skaters on the rinks.

The whole diplomatic corps, especially the younger members, are much interested in both the outdoor and the indoor diversion and make enthusiastic members of the club. Young Henry Martin, secretary of the Swiss Legation, is fond of skating with Miss Julia Meyer, and the young couple attracted much attention a few days ago as they executed some fancy and difficult steps. The Baroness Hengelmiller and her little daughter, Baroness Mila Hengelmiller, are among the cleverest and most graceful seen on the floor. Count d'Adhemer is one of the most daring as well as one of the most expert. Others who attend the roller skating parties are Miss Laura Merriam, the debutante sister of Mrs. John T. Wheelwright of Boston; Count de Buisseret; the Swedish Minister and Mme. de Lagercrantz; Baron Rosen, wife of the Russian Ambassador, and her daughter, Baroness Elizabeth Rosen; Count Henri de Vogue, Prince de Ligne, Mrs. Reynolds Hitt, Miss Kinen of Paris, niece of Mme. Loudon of the Netherlands; Countess Moltke, Miss Katherine Britton, Mrs. Richard Townsend and Miss Gladys Hackley.

The usual dinner for the members of the Society of Colonial Wars that is to be given at the Hotel Somerset on Wednesday evening, March 30. The guest of honor this year will be Professor George Walter Prothero of Oxford, England. Professor Prothero is lecturing this Winter at Harvard University and is giving some of the Lowell Institute lectures. Mrs. Prothero, who is with her husband, has recently been a dinner guest with him at dinners given by President and Mrs. Abbott Lawrence Lowell and by Professor James of Harvard. At the dinner on March 30 there will be a number of distinguished speakers, besides Professor Prothero. It will be remembered that the distinguished Oxford professor succeeded Lord Acton as editor of "The Literary History of America." He is a member of the Massachusetts Historical Society and was in America about five years ago to deliver a course of lectures at Harvard. Professor and Mrs. Prothero are being extensively entertained among the Cambridge set during their stay here.

Dramatic Readings to Be Heard by Many.

TWO interesting entertainments to which a large number of society are looking forward this week and next are the dramatic reading which Mrs. George Percy Morris of Waverley street, Brookline, is giving at the two series of readings with [illegible] which she has been delighting a large following throughout the Winter. Last Wednesday Mrs. Morris gave a series of five readings from modern drama, which proved so popular that she has been in constant demand and has given many additional readings in homes of her friends in addition to the two series which she has arranged for one in Cambridge and the other in Brookline. Mrs. Colin Campbell, of Gardner street, Allston, has had charge of one of the three series in each instance. The next reading which Mrs. Morris will give begins to-morrow afternoon at half past two at the home of Mrs. Harcourt Dunning, No. 22 Centre street, Cambridge. The only reading she gave during the past week was on Thursday, at the home of Mrs. Thomas Dolliver Allen on Irving street, Cambridge. The play she chose was "The Melting Pot," by Israel Zangwill, which is so popular this season. Her selection for to-morrow is "Strife," by John Galsworthy. Doubtless the most interesting play in the whole series, however, is the one she is to read on Tuesday afternoon, March 1, at the home of Mrs. A. L. Hathaway of St. Paul street, Brookline. The choice for this afternoon is that delightful drama, "The Piper," by Mrs. Marks (Josephine Preston Peabody), wife of Professor Marks of Cambridge.

By FELIX ST. CLAIR.

SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM, the distinguished English comedian who was knighted for his services in elevating the British stage, will be in Boston during the next fortnight with the much-talked-of comedy, "The Mollusc." Sir Charles is well and favorably known in this city, and those of us who have seen his David Garrick have never forgotten it.

Vaughan Glaser who is starring in a dramatization of the famous novel of Augusta J. Evans, "St. Elmo," comes to the Globe Theatre for a limited engagement.

These are the only new bills at the high-priced theatres. "Ben Hur" at the Boston has found itself as popular as ever. "The Midnight Sons" at the Shubert is settling down for a successful run. William Hodge at the Park and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" at the Tremont continue to carry with them Maude Adams at the Hollis and Walker Whiteside at the Majestic begin the last week of their engagements to-morrow night.

Cox and Johnson, that clever colored team of comedians, in their musical comedy, "The Red Moon," begin a week's stay at the Grand Opera House.

The Castle Square Theatre stock company will continue "Shore Acres" a third week. There are new bills at the Howard, Casino, Columbia and Gaiety.

Pity the poor actor. Washington's birthday comes on Tuesday this year and he must play three matinees this week.

The advance man for Sir Charles Wyndham announced that his principal would bring his latest success, "The Mollusc," to the Colonial Theatre. He was a courtly, suave and very intellectual, as befits the advance man for Sir Charles, and he was so dignified that I didn't dare ask him what was a mollusc. But after he left I wasn't sure whether it was an oyster, clam, shrimp or periwinkle so I decided to look in the dictionary. Running my finger down the column I found "mouse" "see mollusk." Jumping to the head of the next column I found "mollusk," and this is what I read:

"Mollusk—A grand division of the animal kingdom, including the classes cephalopoda, gastropoda, pteropoda, scaphopoda and lamellibranchia or conchifera."

"Of course, why didn't I remember that," I murmured, and read on:

"It has an unsegmented bilateral body with a mantle which incloses either a branchial or a pulmonary cavity. It has a calcareous shell, which may be univalve, bivalve or multivalve."

"Bivalve," declared Rush Jones, laying his finger on the pith of the explanation. "I knew it was an oyster. If Sir Charles Wyndham can play an oyster he's all right, that's what I say."

Sir Charles, however, does not attempt the impossible. "The Mollusc" of Hubert Henry Davies's play is a woman. She is so called, not because she is dumb, for she isn't. She is merely lazy and makes everybody about her do things for her instead of doing them herself. Her husband, played by Sir Charles, is her victim, but when a pretty governess comes he nearly gets away from her. She only precipitates him by ceasing to be a mollusc.

Vaughan Glaser brings to Boston the dramatization of a much-discussed novel. Those who have read the book readily discern the opportunities for dramatic action in its situation. And the character of St. Elmo, that stern, masterful man, who is scarred and made evil through woman's treachery, who goes through the world doing wrong, is one which requires an actor of parts. Vaughan Glaser is said to be a most vivid and picturesque interpretation.

And then there is the young girl who begins by hating him, who is so cruelly treated by him in his efforts to test and prove her and who finally triumphs over the powers of evil so strong in him. She is also a dramatic character. The intense realism of the book has been preserved in the dramatic version.

WILSON WILL LECTURE TO-NIGHT.

There will be a lecture at the Hollis Street Theatre this evening which will be free to all. The lecturer in chief will be no less a person than Francis Wilson, and the subject of his address will be, "Why the Massachusetts Law regarding children on the stage should be modified or repealed." The State Legislature is invited and dared to be present, and less any who know Wilson think that he will be funny to-night, he desires to say there will be no humor in his address unless it is unconscious humor.

The Supreme Court ruling which prevents children from participating in stage entertainments hits Francis Wilson very hard. He has written and is starring in a comedy called a "Bachelor's Baby," and was booked to play Boston very shortly. In this play there is an important part for a young child. To omit the child would be worse than Hamlet without the Danish prince. So Wilson has cancelled his booking in Boston and has a few remarks to make thereupon.

In charity some one ought to warn him that the Massachusetts judges are not so lenient as those of New York in regard to contempt of court. Look out, Wilson, that's all.

* * * * * * * * *

Why is it that bad table manners, which disgust us in a restaurant, amuse us on the stage? When the comedian in carving the turkey places one foot on the bird in order to hold it steady, audiences roar with mirth. When he grabs the dripping roast gobbler by one leg and hits the other comedian over the head with it, laughter is uproarious.

So in the "Midnight Sons" Harry Fisher at the banquet scene is observed fooling with a large olive.

"What are you going to do with that olive?" he is asked.

"Eat it," replies the comedian, briefly.

"Well, why are you tying a string to it?

"In case I do not like it," replies Fisher.

Isn't that a beautiful thought.

* * * * * * * * *

"What is a tri-reme?"

It was at a performance of "Ben Hur," and a blue-eyed blonde was asking the question of her escort in perfect confidence that he would know.

He lowered his voice as he replied: "A tri-remo? Why, that was the old Roman name for a race track. You know they have a chariot race in this show."

And this wasn't such a bad explanation as some. But when the curtain rose and revealed the interior of the Roman war galley, or trireme, I could see the lady grin. She didn't say anything, because she was sensible and hoped to be taken to more plays in the future.

The chariot race in "Ben Hur" is still the most tremendous scene that staggercraft has evolved. A touch of realism is given by the fact that after the race, in which twenty horses participate, an odor evidently of the stables is wafted across the footlights.

SHOW DOG LOSES JOB—TOO NATURAL.

A change has been made in the cast of "The Man from Home" at the Park Theatre. The white bulldog that Echlin P. Gayer, who plays the part of the English nobleman, has been leading around the stage during the seven weeks' engagement here has been "fired" and an English brindle pup has taken his place in the play.

The new dog is used because William Hodge insisted upon it. He sent the property man to Fred Wright, who is manager of the company, to demand that a new dog be found for the part. Wright said that he wouldn't do it, because the old dog had been behaving himself exceedingly well.

"Well, Mr. Hodge insists," said the property man. "He says the old dog is getting too used to the stage. It doesn't get a laugh a night. Mr. Hodge says it always got a big laugh before it got used to the stage, but now it just looks, and he won't stand for it."

"All right, then go and get a new dog," said the manager, and last night the new brindle pup made his debut.

Al Woods is a better press agent than anybody he has working for him by that appellation. Woods backs a fortune out of sensational melodrama and as the moving picture theatre is ingoring the business of the old time melodrama, he has become a producer of high-priced shows. All are sensational along other lines. "The Girl From Rector's" has visited Boston. "The Girl in the Taxi" is yet to come. Chicago critics call it bad names, but just listen to Al.

"I just had to put in a song for Adele Ritchie," he said. "I didn't want to do it, but I had to do it to protect the audiences.

"You see, 'The Girl in the Taxi' is the funniest farce ever written. It's so funny that every few days I jump on a train and go out to Chicago just to see it and have a good laugh. Well, we have three great laughing situations. The audience goes into spasms when they are reached.

"Then we build up to a fourth one. Now, if I let that go through without any let-up, why, those guys out front would just choke. They'd choke to death sure, from laughing. So, just before we get to the fourth big situation I have Miss Ritchie sing a song. That gives the audiences a little rest, and they recover their breath sufficiently to pull through that last big situation alive."

* * * * * * * * *

Sheridan Block of "The Melting Pot" company gives some of the early stage experiences that is interesting. It was his story, in the second act of a military drama, to turn to the General and say:

"Shall I go to the war office to acquaint them with these terrible occurrences?"

A gallery boy who didn't like Block's acting yelled down:

"For goodness sake, do, and don't never come back."

Block has since improved.

Old Neptune put a stop to the production of "The Climax" on shipboard going to England. The day set for the performance on the Mauretania three or four of the actors were seasick and the play had to be abandoned.

"Chantecler," Rostand's latest play, will be produced in New York next Fall, and will be brought to the Boston Theatre by Charles Frohman. The characters of Chantecler are barnyard fowl, and in spite of the absurd nature of the piece it has achieved success in Paris.

Among this season's most interesting and important dramatic offerings provided by Charles Frohman, that most enterprising and indefatigable producing manager, is "The Builder of Bridges," by Alfred Sutro, a powerful domestic drama of present day life, possessing a surprisingly unique plot, replete with unusual situations and being surprisingly original in treatment as well as absorbing in interest. Mr. Belasco and a company of accomplished players will be seen at the Colonial Theatre in this city on March 14. The engagement will be one of a fortnight.

The first Belasco offering of the current season will appear at the Majestic The-atre for a limited engagement beginning Monday evening, February 28, when there will be presented for the first time in this city "Le Matrimonio a Enfiore," a comedy adapted from the German. The play was presented at the Belasco Theatre in New York early in the season and the limited engagement, which it was forced to contend, was a prosperous engagement on account of other bookings.

* * * * * * * * *

One year since its first production and not a single adverse criticism in the record of "Shore Acres," the famous comedy which Herbert Cresman is presenting and which will come to the B. F. Keith Theatre for two weeks beginning Feature 28. The play enjoyed a run of nearly six months at Wallack's Theatre last season, and but for the best of June would have remained much longer. In Chicago and Philadelphia the play was received just as favorably.

* * * * * * * * *

Raymond Hitchcock will be given a hearty greeting when he comes to the Tremont Theatre as the next star at that house. Only recently he has closed his successful and long New York engagement in "The Man Who Owned Broadway," and that is the comedy in which he will be seen in Boston.

Channing Pollock's adaptation of Miss Michelena's popular novel, "In the Bishop's Carriage," with Miss Regina Longfellow in the leading role, will be next week's attraction at the Grand Opera House.

BILLS AT BOSTON THEATRES

Colonial.

Sir Charles Wyndham brings his London company to the Colonial and will present "The Mollusc" during the next fortnight, exactly as it has been given in New York and London. Sir Charles is one of the greatest living actors and was knighted for distinguished services to the British stage. "The Mollusc" is by Davies and has been the vehicle for the display of Sir Charles' art in the part of a person who hinders rather than helps others, who makes no efforts, but compels all to attend upon him or her. In this case it is a her who is "The Mollusc."

Globe.

Mr. Vaughan Glaser, in "St. Elmo," with the same cast that was seen at the Academy of Music, New York City, a few weeks ago, including Miss Fay Courtenay, comes to the Globe.

Mr. Glaser is well known to Boston theatregoers for his admirable work in the past. The production is magnificent in its construction, being made from an-

Castle Square.

"Shore Acres" is such an emphatic success at the Castle Square that it will begin another, and positively its last, week on Monday. Mr. Craig's acting of Uncle Nat is the hit of the performance.

Park Theatre.

William Hodge in "The Man From Home," appears to have scored a success unquestionably great. Crowded houses have been the rule at every performance from the start and the demand for seats two weeks in advance is said to surpass everything in the history of the theatre.

Boston.

"Ben-Hur" has started in to break all records, other than those of grand opera, at the Boston Theatre. Every performance and [illegible] of the week has seen capacity audiences and the advance sale for the limited engagement is simply enormous. There is a long line of purchasers of tickets at the box office every day.

Funny Yarns Told for the Sunday American by Harry Lauder

By FELIX ST. CLAIR

HARRY LAUDER, off the stage, is nearly as queer looking as he is upon the boards. He is very short; in fact, in height and build he resembles that well-known Boston character, Sammy Miranda. But he has a keen, intelligent face, a bald head and an air of being important. He wears a brown fur overcoat, which accentuates his beam. When he talks you immediately understand where he gets the broad Scotch burr which flavors his songs and stories; it is his natural way of speaking.

I heard that Lauder was very conceited and not particularly good natured. This is hardly fair to him. I should not call him conceited, as actors go. To be sure, he frankly admits that he is good, but what actor, no matter how bad, has not the same opinion. And as for ill nature, he chatted for half an hour of various things with never a sneer or a fling at people or things, but with the wit which stands by him on the stage.

Scotch dialect is much more formidable written than spoken. Nobody has any difficulty in understanding Lauder, but if Watson or S. R. Crockett should write one of his speeches phonetically, it would be a hard nut for the reader to crack. Barring a few Scotch expressions and a rich brogue he talks much as we do.

Lauder has just returned from a tour of the west, during which he visited portions of America out of the route of the vaudeville entertainer. "I enjoyed the trip verra much," he said. "It was an education to me, and I come back with a great respect for the American people wherever they may be found."

He chuckled to himself. "They're just the same on the mountain top as in the valley. I mind me of an experience I had in Denver. The train brought us into Denver a few minutes before I was to appear at the theatre. I hustled into my costumes and went before the footlight and began to sing. Weel do you know I was terrible short of breath. I gasped and blithered like a fish on shore while I hollowed my merriest ditties and all the time I was sayin' 'Puir Harry Lauder. Ye'll never see yer ain country again. What can the matter be?" And as I continued, for I determined to die fightin,' my breath came harder and harder. When I made my exit after the first song I rushed up to the manager and said:

"'What can be the matter with me? I canna' get my breath.'

"'Oh,' says he, cool as you please, 'It's the rarified atmosphere. You'll get used to it after a while.'

"I didn't mind it see much when I learned what it was, but do you ken that in all my studies I never heard of rarified atmosphere before. It is a verra interesting thing, that, fine for people with weak lungs but bad for husky fellers like me."

"Do you think we 're likely to have rain soon?' asked Lauder.

"Very likely."

"I'm fond o' rainy days. It minds me of hame. And on a rainy day when I can't go out I sit in my room and then is the time I think of poems. I write them down and sing them to what ever tune comes into my head, and then I write down the music and I has a new song. Yes, I'm turrible fond o' rainy days. Rainy days are fine for tellin' stories and many the fine yarn I pick up in such weather.

"Did ye ever hear the 'Grandfather's clock story?' Mon, that is a real good tale. Ye ken that flittering day in Scotland is the 28th of May, and that corresponds to moving day here. If a tenant is in the house after twelve o'clock of the 28th he is liable for anither month's rent. Weel, Sandy Thompson was flitting, not so far, just doon tae the end o' the street. So being a careful mon he decided to move his goods himself, with the aid of a wheelbarrow, stid callin' in the movin' man.

HARRY LAUDER

"He moved every night after his wark until there was only one object left in the house, a tall grandfayther's clock. It was ten by that same clock in the nicht when Sandy came to carry it. It was quite a load, but he hoisted it up on his back and walked verra carefully lest he should jar it. The face of the clock was over his head and the tail near touched the ground, bent double as he was under it.

"As he walked doon the street, it happened that Jock McGregor was comin' up. Jock had been to a Burns supper and had quite a few drinks ye ken. Well when he saw Sandy bending under the weight of the great clock, a great pity for the poor fule body came to him and he said kindly, as one would speak to a child

"'Sandy, mon, it would be na so much trouble if you would carry a watch'"

"This may be an old story to you, but when a mon told it tae me I near split wi' laughter. It happened out in one of the small towns in the west. There was a convention or county fair or some ither contraption and the town was fu' tae overflowin'. The hotel was filled with guests and many more wanted room. In this emergency—and I want ta say right here that for meeting emergencies you Yankees are hard ta beat—at this moment, the proprietor happened to think o' the meeting-house across the way. 'If I could put some of em to sleep in the kirk it would settle the problem,' said he, and he went to see the head deacon or whatever you call him over here

"'Weel,' said the deacon, 'if you'll promise to clean out the kirk after the sleepers and see that they do no damage, and maybe give me a wee bit o' commission, I think I can fix it.'

"Accordingly, when nicht fell, full thirty sleepers were placed in the wee bit kirk, and each man had a cushioned pew, so as bad you ken. The tavern keeper put a watchman in the church to see that all was proper and went to sleep

"It was two in the morning or maybe three, when the whole village was aroused by the pealing o' the kirk bell. Men sprang from their beds and the volunteer fire department brought out their engine and the hotel proprietor rushed down stairs in alarm. There he meets his watchman who rushed in all oot o' breath and says he

"'Mon alive. Who's ringing the kirk bell at this unholy hour? Who's ringing that bell?'

"'Askin' yer pardon, sir,' says the watchman. 'It's the mon in pew thirteen and he wants a Martini cocktail.'"

'That's a braw tale that, an' they say the Scotch ha no sense of humor. Their is anither story I mind that shows what a careful people we are at hame.

"Jock McPherson was sailing across the blue ocean. He were a popular body and all his friends gathered to see him off. There was tears and handshakin' and muckle drinking o' healths until finally all the party were verra merry. Sandy, bein' the object of all this attention, naturally tried to do his duty like a mon and when there was brought out a bottle o' rare old Scotch whiskey, he took several glasses and they tasted verra fine. They made him forget the sad parting. He only knew that it tasted verra good. Weel, the ship sailed out past the harbor bar and by and by she began to rock and pitch with a most uneasy motion for a man with a full stomach. Jock felt a bit uneasy and then he got white across the gills, and then he got verra sick. What was in his stomach tried hard to come up, but Jock firmly locked his lips and said nay.

"One of the officers was passin' and seein' him in this state said, 'Man alive, ye're only seasick. Don't hold back. Let it come up.'

"'Let it come up,' demanded Jock in wrath. 'Why you poor fule its whiskey.'"

THE GIRL AT THE SWITCHBOARD.

By Dorothy Dix.

SCENE—Telephone booth in lower hall of fashionable apartment house. Tiled floor. Walls of white marble and red burlap. Potted palm, etc. Pretty girl, with elaborately dressed hair, seated at telephone desk. Enter another pretty young girl, also with the latest thing in hair.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE: Sadie, the telephone operator. Mame, her chum.

SADIE (joyfully)—Hello, Mame!

MAME—Lo, Sadie!

SADIE—Gee, but I'm glad to see you. Got any gum?

MAME (producing a packet from her handbag)—Yep. I never travel without it. Got some dandy. New brand. Called "The Ladies' Delight."

SADIE (helping herself to a slab)—That's right. That's what I always say. People talk about who are ladies and who ain't ladies, but I always say that I can tell a perfect lady the minute I see her by the way she chews her gum.

MAME—And that ain't no merry jest either. There's folks that just laps on their gum, and other folks that munches on it like it was a ham sandwich, and others that keeps their jaws a-wagging as fast and regular as if they were entered into a pie-eating contest, and——

SADIE—There ain't no class to chewing gum that way.

MAME—That's what I always say. If you want to show that you are a real lady and used to the best society, you want to chew your gum quiet, and calm and dignified.

SADIE—That's right, and that's why I told Tom Perkins that he needn't be a telling me how swell that Mabel Smithkins was, and how she belonged to an old family that done seen better days. "You take it from me," I says to him, "that this here present 8 p. m. at which we are talking is the best hour of the day that she ever seen." "How do you dope that out?" says he. "By the way she chews her gum," says I, "and more than that," says I. "I bet that when she goes to bed she sticks her gum on the back of the bureau or under the edge of the bed, instead of having a regular place for it. I bet that chewing the rag is all that she is used to."

"I don't see nothing the matter with the way she chews her gum!" says he. "Well," says I, "there ain't never no use in trying to warn a man against a woman, because you can't make him believe that there is any danger until the steam roller has done passed over him and smashed him as flat as a pancake, and even then, like as not, he thinks that what is the matter with him is that you flung a brick at him. An ungrateful lot, men are."

MAME (admiringly)—You are on to 'em. In your position here you've got a chance to see and hear a lot.

SADIE (complacently)—That's right. Honest, Mame, the things that goes over this wire certainly do make you sit up. Looks like to me that there ain't nothing that happens in the whole world from birth to death, or joy to sorrow, or love to hate, that I don't listen to at some time during the day. Why, it's got so I don't take no more interest in going to the theatre. What they are doing on the stage seems sort of flat by the side of what I've been listening to all day, and as for reading books—why, when I get through with this job if I just tell what I really know about folks I could write enough novels to fill one of them Carnegie libraries. And every one of them would be a thriller, too. Only most of 'em they wouldn't let go through the mails.

MAME (enviously)—It must be exciting.

SADIE (deprecatingly)—Oh—so, so! You get so used to it that you sort of lose interest after awhile, but I tell you one thing, Mame, being the girl at the switchboard ain't no matrimonial promoter, and if them suffragists is foxy they'll do a lot of canvassing among the telephone operators, and I'll bet every hello girl in town will join 'em.

MAME (curiously)—How's that?

SADIE—Well, being a telephone operator shakes your faith in man. Honest to goodness, Mame, you don't know what doubled-dyed villains and champion liars men are until you have been in this business. That's straight. And some of the stories that they hand their poor, deluded wives over the phone is enough to make you sick. It's like trying to take in a blind baby, and what gets me is why the women stand for them as well as they do.

MAME—The telephone is a great thing. I don't know how we ever got along without it.

SADIE (cynically)—I don't know how married men ever did. It's one thing for a man to try to put over an excuse when his wife has got him nailed with her eye and another thing to sing it out over the wire when he is about five miles off.

MAME (giggling)—I bet it's safer for a lot of 'em!

SADIE—That's right. But you had oughter hear 'em. I got so that I can tell by the sound of a man's voice when he calls up his wife when he is going to give her a song and dance about not being able to get home to dinner. Ordinarily, they are sort of gruff and crisp in the way they speak, you know, but when a man is going to hand his wife a few that won't bear investigation, why his voice gets like sugar and oil mixed. Oh, I know 'em. I've got their numbers, all right.

MAME (admiringly)—I bet you!

SADIE—I call 7 o'clock my rush hour. That's the time I get busy connecting up the wives who are waiting dinner with the husbands who are side-stepping downtown, and I hear something like this:

"Is that you, Pet? Say, Baby, don't wait dinner for me. I'll be there just as soon as I can possibly come, but the man from Kansas that I was going to see about that business deal—what business deal? You never heard of it before, or any man from Kansas? Why, darling one, it really hurts my feelings that you take so little interest in my business—our business, for nothing isn't complete to me that hasn't you in it—that you forget what I tell you about a thing that is as important as this is—that our whole family may depend on it if I can only get him going right.

"Oh, well, if you are sorry, I'll forgive you this time; but what I was going to say was, this man from Kansas has just blown in, and is going on to Europe in the morning, and this is positively the ONLY chance I'll have to talk to him, and so I just MUST stay downtown—yes—it will probably be pretty late before we get through. Yes, I'll get a bite to eat, a sandwich or something like that. Now, by-bye. Eat your dinner while it's good and hot, and think of your old man."

MAME—Say, but they are there with the line of talk, all right, ain't they?

SADIE—Sure. You had ought to hear 'em spiel. Sometimes it will go like this: "Is that you, Angel Face? Can you hear me distinctly? I didn't know, because these country 'phones are generally on the bum. Say, sweetheart, I bet you can't guess where I am? No. I am away out in the country, just walked two miles across the worst road you ever saw to telephone you not to wait dinner or to sit up for me. You know the boss has got that bug in his head about my being the wise guy about automobiles, and so he asked me if I wouldn't go—as a sort of favor to him, you know—out with him in his machine to see if I could find out what was the matter with it. Something the matter with the carburetor, or the spark plug, or something like that. 'Course I couldn't refuse. Boss's invitation equal to a command, you know, and besides he said we would be home by six o'clock sure, but we got away out here and the blame thing blew out a fuse, and goodness knows when we'll get her started up again.

"No, there is no way to get in on the cars. Besides, I couldn't leave the boss here by his lonesome, if there were. There would be the blue envelope for me if I did, and then where'd somebody a Easter hat come from, I'd like to know. So just go along and peck away at that good little dinner that the best little housekeeper in all Boston gets up every day, and while you are eating it just think about your poor old hubby sitting on the side of the road nibbling on his fingers and wishing that he was his birdikins."

MAME—And where he'd be while he was chirping this fairy tale to his wife?

SADIE—Oh, the number that central passes me is generally that of some cafe.

MAME—Do the wives stand for them kind of excuses?

SADIE—The old ones do and the young ones don't. I guess that by the time a woman has been married to a man five years she takes what he says without going behind the returns—unless he's got money enough to make the alimony worth while.

Some of the Newest Jokes by the Comedians

Roger Imhof.

By ROGER IMHOF,
The well-known Irish Comedian of the "Rads and Follies" Co.

A NEWSPAPER man who was interviewing me remarked that he had seen my show only once.

"Are there many people in your line?" he asked.

When I told him that, according to statistics, there are about five thousand comedians in the United States he said:

"It seems strange that some of them don't go on the stage."

A CHARITABLE woman asked me to give her a dollar to bury a newspaper critic. I gladly contributed ten dollars and told her to bury ten of them.

A MAN walked into a saloon and asked for a parachute cocktail. He explained to the bartender that he'd been flying pretty high lately and wanted something to let him down easy.

NOAH'S ARK was the first bank. At any rate, that is where currency is first mentioned. The duck had a bill, the lamb had four quarters, the frog a green back and the skunk a scent.

WHILE watching a large parade the other day I asked a man what it was. "Well," he said, "those felons in automobiles at the head of the line are wholesale liquor dealers. That fine looking body of men on horseback is the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association."

"And who are those bedraggled looking fellows piking along in the rear?" I inquired.

"Oh, those are the ultimate consumers."

I WAS in a Broadway car the other day. It was very crowded and many were standing. Over in one corner I noticed a young man asleep. Pretty soon the conductor came along, shook the young man by the shoulder and said gruffly:

"Wake up. You can't sleep here!"

The young man said, "I wasn't asleep."

"Well, you have your eyes shut," the conductor said.

"I know I did," the young man replied, "but I can't bear to see a lady stand up."

In the same car a middle-aged lady asked a man to give her his seat.

"You believe in woman's rights, don't you?" asked the man.

"Yes, indeed, I do," the lady replied.

"Well, then stand up like a man and enjoy them."

IT is surprising how cheap some people will work. In a bookstore the other day I saw a sign reading "Charles Dickens Works All This Week for Five Dollars." Don't you think it's bad enough to work for such small pay without advertising it?

"WHAT'S your occupation?" a man asked me the other day.

I told him that I was an actor.

"Yes, I know," the man said, "but what do you do for a living?"

I BELONGED to a fine club once—an Irish club. We met only once in every four weeks, because it took us all the rest of the time to get out of the hospital. One day the wife of the president of the club presented him with twin babies, and we decided to take the club's band over and serenade him.

After we had played several beautiful pieces in front of the house the president came out on the veranda and said:

"Men, your music has pleased me so much that I am going to fill all your instruments with twenty dollar gold pieces."

And just my luck—there I was with a flute!

SPEAKING of San Francisco, reminds me of the man who owned some fine homing pigeons. He made a bet with a friend of his that his fastest pigeon could fly from California to New York in two days. Having no money, the owner of the pigeon arranged that his friend should take the bird to Frisco and release it.

The friend made the trip all right, but before he turned the pigeon loose he carefully clipped all the feathers off its wings and tail. This was on Sunday. Back in New York the owner of the prize pigeon anxiously awaited the arrival of the bird.

I asked the owner if the bird got home Monday.

He said "No."

I asked him if it arrived Tuesday.

"No, not Tuesday."

I suggested that it probably got to New York Wednesday.

"Nope, I didn't see anything of it Wednesday."

Then I asked if it got home Thursday.

"Yes, the pigeon reached New York Thursday afternoon about 1.30 o'clock."

"How did the bird look after the long trip?" I inquired.

"He looked all right," was the reply, "but his feet was awful sore."

NOW, let me tell what happened to a friend of mine up in Portland, Maine. Her name was Eliza Payson, and I used to go to school with her. Later on she married a man named Marshall, and after a while had the good luck to become a widow. Thrown on her own resources, she decided to take in washing. So she painted for herself a nice big sign on the outside of the blinds of the window—one half on each blind.

NO. MRS MAR EXPERIENCED LA SEE SAMPLES SHOP OPENS
I SHALL UNDRESS IN THIS WINDOW AT 7 O'CLOCK SHARP
I SHALL UNDRESS IN THIS WINDOW AT 7 O'CLOCK SHARP

Next morning Mrs. Marshall was very much perplexed when she looked out of the window to see half the town standing in eager expectancy, but when she rushed outside and observed that one of the blinds had blown open during the night she understood what the crowd was waiting for. The accompanying picture shows just what happened.

Overheard in the Subway Crush---at Park Street

SCENE—Platform of the subway station at Park Street. The hour is 5:30 p. m., and, as usual, the "Subway Crush" more than justifies its fame.

An occasional head raised above the surrounding sea of hats and bonnets conveys the impression that this writhing, grumbling, protesting mass is not homogeneous, like a well-mixed salad, but is really made up of separate individuals.

One party of four persons, strangers to Boston and guests of a downtown hotel, has found partial refuge behind a pillar in the centre of the platform. They are two pretty girls just verging upon womanhood, a tall youth in the budding-mustache stage, and a distinguished looking man of middle age with a snow-white full beard who wears gold-mounted nose glasses.

JULIA (almost in tears)—My ostrich plume's broken!

GRACE—(ignoring)—My bird of paradise is ruined! That fat man grabbed it right out by the roots!

JULIA—And we've a box for the opera, too!

UNCLE HENRY (trying to comfort them)—Cheer up, girls, you don't have to wear your hats in the box.

JULIA—But we must wear them till we're in the box—oh dear! And we're dining at the Lenox!

ARTHUR (to the girls)—Never mind girls; we can have the [illegible] And for Uncle Henry's stomach!

(The fat man, plowing through the crush, has jabbed an elbow into Arthur's side. He thrusts Uncle Henry aside and lands against the staircase, crowding the two girls against the pillar.)

FAT MAN (cheerfully)—Ha, ha! Always room for one more!

UNCLE HENRY (glaring at him)—Certainly. Make yourself quite at home!

GRACE (with fierce indignation)—Uncle Henry, this is the man who spoiled my bird of paradise!

FAT MAN (beaming on her)—Oh, accidents will happen, you know. Ain't used to the subway, be you?

(Buries himself with a large, soft hand on Grace's shoulder.)

UNCLE HENRY (sternly)—Keep your hands off that young lady!

FAT MAN (with a genially protecting air)—That's all right, Jack. This ain't the first time I've looked after strangers in the subway crush. You stick to me and I'll get you aboard the car or bust my [illegible]

(Sudden shrieks from the platform edge where the crowd seems actually hanging over the tracks.)

JULIA—Oh! A man has fallen off the platform! The car is coming! He will be killed!

GRACE (with her hands over her eyes)—Oh! oh! Take me away from this dreadful place!

FAT MAN—Ha, ha! 'Taint a man; it's only his hat!

(A colored woman with a basket filled with soiled clothes, for the wash having been pushed down the stairs, wriggles around the pillar, jumps into Uncle Henry's stomach and is glued there by the crush behind her.)

COLORED WOMAN (to Uncle Henry)—Scuse me, mistah!

UNCLE HENRY (in desperation)—If you'll drop that basket or the fruit, and go somewhere else, I'll give you five dollars.

ARTHUR—Here's our car!

FAT MAN (clearing a path by jabbing his elbows into people's stomachs, right and left)—Stick to me, Judge, with your girls. Stick close and I'll get you aboard.

(The car stops. A flying wedge of men at the bottom of the stairs lunges toward it. Women scream. Hats are smashed. Shopping bundles are torn open and their contents strewn underfoot. Uncle Henry forcibly restrains Arthur and the girls from leaving their corner by the pillar.)

PLATFORM MAN (calmly)—Easy now!

(A deadlock of people trying to force their way on. The fat man's elbows are doing deadly execution.)

FAT MAN (calling back over his shoulder)—Come on, you [illegible]

(Suddenly three young and athletic Northerners hurl themselves upon the fat man, smashing his hat down over his eyes and rushing him through the crush back into Uncle Henry's arms. People take this opportunity to rush across the platform. For one instant there is a clear path to the car door.)

ARTHUR—Now's our chance, Uncle Henry!

CONDUCTOR—All aboard!

(The door is banged shut in a woman's face, catching her coat.)

WOMAN—Oh! I'm caught in the door! Save me!

(The car starts. A working man seeing that the car cannot be stopped in time to save the woman's life, seizes her coat and tears it free. The coat is ruined, but the woman is saved.)

JULIA (pale and trembling)—Oh, Uncle Henry! did you see that? We shall be killed! I want to go home.

GRACE (frightened and [illegible])—I want to go back to the hotel.

(Then the car crawls along the subway towards the Public Garden entrance. On Boylston street it enters a big block.)

ARTHUR (gloomily, looking at his watch)—We'll miss our dinner all right.

UNCLE HENRY (trying to be cheerful)—But we'll be in time for the opera. Perhaps we can pick up a sandwich somewhere on our way.

(More crawling along Boylston street.)

UNCLE HENRY (out of patience)—By this time we could have walked to the Lenox and ordered our dinner.

At 7:35, when the car reached Copley square, Uncle Henry jumped his guests into a taxi for the Opera House. "What's the use; we didn't want dinner, anyway," he said.

Dotty Dialogues by Wex Jones

"You're a married man, Jinks," said Binks. "Did you ever know there was such a thing as Domestic Arts and Sciences?"

"I know well enough there's a good deal of domestic art about the way Mrs. Jinks gets money out of me. Also a good deal of domestic science about keeping me from going out evenings."

"That's all right," said Binks, "but not what I mean—this is Domestic Arts and Sciences, with capital letters, just the same as the Art the Bohemians talk about."

"I suppose then that if Mrs. Jinks made a huckleberry pie, a Domestic Artist and Scientist would say, 'It's fairy, but is it Art?'"

Perhaps so," replied Binks. "Anyway, there's a school of D. A. & S. in the University of Michigan, and there's a class in marketing and the professor tells the pupils that wives waste one-fifth of hubby's salary by their ignorance of marketing. And further, that in most cases husbands took stimulants because they didn't get the right kind of food at home."

"Very fine," said Jinks.

"Yes, the professor, he says, says he, that proper study by the housekeeper would reduce intoxication very materially. I think he's right, too. Isn't it a sad picture—the husband rushing out to the nearest saloon, whence he emerges after a hard day's wage slavery, fondly hoping for a pot roast combination as the chicken. He enters the house, where his dear wife has lacked a knowledge of proper dietetic errors their wives were to be mutton chop places upon the table, not a pot roast, pen."

"Great," said Jinks. "How about but a stewed chicken. After vainly endeavoring to eat a few morsels, the husband realizes that this terrible thing had to happen because of his wife's ignorance of proper dietetic errors their wives were to be mutton chop."

"And what particular dishes lead to sale, Binks?"

"I don't know how the professor would explain that, unless on the ground that the dinner of the night before had already been [illegible] perhaps they might have telephoned home and learned just what fresh scared into drinking whiskey by a mutton chop."

"It's all very fine to laugh at it," said Binks. "But haven't I often heard you say, 'Bet there's turkey hash at the house to-night; let's stay home.'"

"Oh, that's different," said Jinks. "Oh, of course. Our own cases are always different. However, let us hope the school of Domestic Arts and Sciences is successful. It would be a great thing to read in, say, a matrimonial ad: 'I am a blonde and considered very pretty by my friends'"—

"How about the enemies?"

"I don't interrupt. 'I am a blonde and considered very pretty by my friends. I have a loving heart and a degree from the School of Domestic Arts and Sciences. Capable of loving an honest man and cooking a steak in fifteen scientific ways.' Wouldn't that assure a man of a good housekeeper?"

"Rubbish," said Jinks. "If you don't like a girl, it doesn't matter if she can grill an ox in a chafing dish. If you do like her, it doesn't matter if she would boil eggs all day and potatoes for three minutes."

"I've got more sense than that," asserted Binks.

"Oh, yes, all you bachelors have," said Jinks. "Chock full of sense you are—until you lose all your senses. I'll bet when you do hook up, you'll invite us to dinner and say you had to send out to a delicatessen store because Araminta can't cook, and you think it would spoil her hands anyway."

"Run away home to your alcohol-provoking dinner," retorted Binks. "I'm a bach for keeps."

"His domestically inartistic and unscientific wife places upon the table, not a pot roast, but a stewed chicken."

"Anyway, there's a school of D. A. & S. in the University of Michigan."

"Does one man, on seeing a pot of baked beans, fly shrieking to the security of a bar?"

"You'll invite us to dinner and say you had to send out to a delicatessen store because Araminta can't cook."

The Song of the Eastern Outlaw---By James Montague

SEE the thieving thug attacking; hear the deadly rifle cracking;
watch the grim marauder sacking bank and residence and store;
Hear the rumble and the rattle of the ebb and flow of battle, while bystanders flee like cattle from the barking forty-four;
See the enterprising bandit make a beetling bluff and land it; see the footpad calmly hand it to the come-on, night and day;
What's the scene of all this pillage, all this carnage and this killage?
Why, the trim and ancient village that abuts the old Fenway.

In the days of song and story, when a bad man wanted glory, he got hands and conscience gory on the woolly Western plains;
Shooting up the population with an eager animation, or with unctuous ostentation robbing Pullman palace trains.

But to-day he does not tarry on the dreary rolling prairie, or, with gun in hand, make merry with the folk of Miner's Hill.
He procures his folding ticket, and departs the poplar thicket, just as fast as he can lick it, heading straight for old Beanville.

In his fashion, which is breezy, all the money that he sees he takes forthwith and finds it easy, never dreaming of arrest,
And, as he sails down his plunder, he must needs sit down and wonder why it was, and what in thunder kept great Jesse James out West.
For the Westerner is funny; when you part him from his money, ere your evening's work is done he may put up a little fight;
But the victim of the city purrs when you call "Kitty, kitty!" hands it out with no self-pity, and says pleasantly "All right."

Captain Kidd, alas departed, sailed on oceans all uncharted. Bold he was and lion-hearted, but at last he got the hooks.
And if he had lived to batten on the purlieus of Boston, on the best there is he'd fatten—one of our distinguished crooks.
Robin Hood, whose avocation was the workmanlike spoliation of the greatest of his nation, very sadly missed his mark.
Thugs get fortunes that are vaster and they come a whole lot faster, with no hazard of disaster, robbing men in any park.

On the lonely Western prairies, where the wild coyote's lair is, far away from "L"s and ferries, everything is tinged with green,
For the West has lost her wildness, she is now all meek-and-mildness, and 'tis jealousy of Boston gives the lains that envious sheen.

SEES GREAT FUTURE FOR BOSTON REALTY

Fine Transit System in Centre of Wealth Valuable Asset, Says C. H. Lewis.

"Less than six months ago I had on my books real estate for sale in different localities throughout Boston and its suburbs, capable of yielding a million dollars worth of income paying property, and buyers were scarce. The situation today is just the reverse, buyers are plenty, and desirable properties are either being withdrawn from the market or for sale only at advanced prices.

"The last week I succeeded in purchasing a desirable investment property on Westland avenue. I am in receipt of offers for both of these properties if different persons who in a few years ago I would have been unable to find a buyer for.

"I am a firm believer in Boston for the future.

"It is the center of the wealthiest and most purchasing community in the United States. It has a system of transportation in the vicinity, covering a 25 mile ride for a cent. It has some of the finest ocean beach resorts open to the public, many of them reached by a 5 cent fare. Its park system is the most complete of any city of its size in the world. Its savings banks have over two hundred and twenty million dollars deposits. Residence property in our suburbs is a never depreciating asset. Business property in the business section of the city is constantly increasing in value. Its shipping facilities are unsurpassed and are bound to increase in value.

The Two-Faced Man

By Herbert Kaufman

—(Copyright, 1909, by Herbert Kaufman.

The man who plays both ends against the middle always gets caught in the middle. Parties in quarrels are in the nature of events forced to compare their cards at some stage of the misunderstanding and so he's bound to be squeezed between the very millstones of trouble which he creates.

No man can be two-faced unless he wears at least one false face. It's simply a matter of time before he must unmask. He can no more escape detection than he can send his shadow on a vacation. His settlement day inevitably arrives; he may postpone it but only by paying a urserer's interest for the accommodation—the more bother he causes, the less mercy he is shown.

When all s said and done, the thing that really starts him wrong is his supreme egotism. He overrates his shrewdness; he underestimates the common sense of the rest of us. He's just a plain dumb fool, who thinks that he can make a dunce out of Fate. He's betting that human nature is wrong and he can't possibly win.

He actually believes that he can make mischief and make good at the same time.

He loses sight of the risk he assumes. He belongs to the same tribe of soft-heads as the professional thief and the chronic bigamist and the lunatic who hopes to acquire the habit of riding over Niagara Falls in a pickle barrel.

Watch out for him. He's infected with folly, and his ailment is contagious; unless you're vaccinated with caution, he'll involve you in a serious tangle.

He's always after something different than what he pretends. The trouble dealer is certain to be a double-dealer; his professed motives are no more real than a drug store complexion —there's something entirely different underneath.

He can't possibly persist and survive; he's sure to be convicted under the Law of Compensation—it operates by gravity; it's the one thing that preserves the Eternal Balance; it's the force that keeps society adjusted and makes Right such a tremendously profitable thing.

He can't be true to any man because he isn't true to himself; he can't keep on because he won't keep faith.

He thinks that he is politic when, all the while, he is merely patent. He doesn't know that the first rudiments of good politics is to play straight with one side—to make good with one party—to inspire confidence and maintain it—to stand by his word so staunchly that a Government bond is by contrast a doubtful investment.

COURAGE!

Think less of the cost of the failure, and fight; it's worth it.
Use Hope for your ally and cut loose from Fright;
Each reflection you waste on the prospect of falling,
Every shudder that quakes you at thought of a mauling, Diverts you and hurts you, and lessens your power;
Just fight on—go right on—make good every hour.
Until you are down you are still on your feet,
If you know you'll win you can't meet with defeat;
Today they may check you,
But they'll never wreck you,
So long as you've courage enough to protect you.

GOVERNMENT ONLY BEAR ON COPPERS

Price Levels Continue to Harden as They Have Been Doing for Last Week.

By E. A. WILKINS.

STATE STREET, Feb. 19.—Coppers are lost no ground except so far as actively is concerned. Price levels are good as is bargaining and have been for a week or two past, except in isolated cases. Liquidation has ceased and it looks as if further improvement would follow.

The real test will come should anything develop to again unsettle the New York market. In that event if copper stocks showed an inclination to divorce themselves from these influences the way would be clear for a better market. But such speculities.

The market got entirely away from [illegible] as there is a bond of sympathy [illegible] of Amalgamated [illegible] the fact that a good many copper [illegible] are owned in New York and throughout the West. In a way conditions which prevail in the market outside of this section have a bearing in Boston. It can [illegible] a case of the house divided against itself to paraphrase an old saying.

The only bearish factor in the entire situation is the Government's attitude toward corporations. This has checked the plans for a general copper merger, but ultimately it is believed they will be carried through in an entirely satisfactory manner. The labor situation in the Butte mining camp through the strike of the engineers employed in the Amalgamated and other mines in that district has not interacted from the generally favorable condition of affairs. In a broad sense it will be a great help to the copper market and will result in stimulating the price of the metal. As a matter of fact, a firmer tone is noted for copper and a sharp recovery in the price is predicted in the near future.

The sharp drop in the price of Utah Consolidated to below 40 discounted the passing of the March dividend. Official utterances that the greater part of last year's dividends were paid out of accumulated surplus money is reason enough for the passing of dividends, especially as ore values were less than those obtained in 1908. The wisdom of making public the attention of vacating the office held by the president of the company obviously checked the decline.

The new Lake Superior issues hold their own, although fluctuations are less sensational. Bulk work continues at the Indiana and North Lake properties, but no important developments have been reported of late. Explorations continue in adjacent territory which may prove market factors. The increase in the Quincy mining dividend is the third increase in local mining shares of late and straws show which way the wind blows.

There was little or no significance in this forenoon's trading. Copper shares initiated a firm tone notwithstanding the [illegible] of prices in the New York market Tuesday being a legal holiday naturally limited trading and there was a continuance of the dullness which has characterized the local market for the past week. It is the general belief that copper will continue at its present level but that will matter the market will work higher, especially for specialties.

FINANCIAL

TRADERS IN RUSH TO SELL, PRICES DOWN

Drop Just Before Holiday Regarded as Temporary Reaction in Firm Market.

By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Although the stock exchange will be open for business Monday professional traders will take a holiday and in preparation for it they sold stocks freely in the closing hour to-day. This selling caused a reaction of from one to three points from the high levels of the morning in the active issues. Reading, Union Pacific, Steel and Rock Island common made new high prices for the movement early in the day. The reaction of Reading was carried down several points and Union Pacific more than 2. In spite of the reactionary movement many stocks closed higher as a result of the day's trading.

Actual figures from the banks gave the street a surprise with a shrinkage in surplus reserves of more than $5,000,000 and a loss in cash of almost a million. Very heavy increases were noted in the loans and in deposits. Owing to the banking powers of the great railroad companies and trust the bank statement is not nothing, but if anything is to be gleaned from that of to-day it is that there has been considerable borrowed in the past week to buy stocks.

London was higher in the American department and closed before the break in Wall Street. The undertone both in London and New York was absolutely firm and the decline is considered only a temporary reaction in an advancing market.

President Taft had a large part part in Wall Street's market this week. His speech of the previous Saturday was used by the Wall Street bears to get a little reaction in the rising market, but with only moderate success early in the week. The speech, on serious consideration, rather helped the market finally, in fact it.

Later in the week, the President's action in deciding to hold secret the returns made by 400,000 corporations in connection with the new Federal tax stimulated the advance that was already in progress. This action of the President is of extreme importance. There are corporations like Reading, Consolidated Gas and Amalgamated Copper that should have their secret archives made public, but there are also thousands of honest corporations which have never attempted to deceive the public, that would be grievously injured by complete publicity, as any private business man would be injured. However, the trend of public sentiment is in favor of publicity, and the corporations have ample warning to prepare for that ultimately. The few that should be exposed are to be spared in behalf of the many innocents that would suffer.

With a [illegible] that [illegible] [illegible] made public, many of the reports of extra dividends failed away. Among others was that on Consolidated Gas, which is now secure in its secret board for some time. Brooklyn Union Gas is still expected to pay an extra dividend to make up the rate to a full 6 per cent. for the last four years. It admits possession of enough money to do this, with earnings of 14 per cent. Reading, however, will escape, and this may mean another postponement of the melon cutting.

The Federal suit against the Coal Trust is expected to come up at Washington next week, and in anticipation of this flowing was made a market leader, rising almost to its high record price. The destruction of the Coal Trust will be a tremendous bull argument on Reading, for it controls the situation, and if the present machinery for handling anthracite is interfered with the price will advance to the consumer and Reading will be in position to get the greatest gain from this advance. The trust does not dare advance prices lest it be attacked, but once the independence of the companies is established by law there will be no limit to what they can charge, and they are prepared to go the limit.

Some hope was injected into the local traction situation by the report of the Interborough Rapid Transit for the past year showing an increase in net earnings of $2,600,000 more passengers were carried than in the previous year. In spite of this increase of business, which also extends to other traction lines in New York city, stock of the Third Avenue sank to new low levels. An expert analysis of Third Avenue shows the stock worth a dollar a share.

Western Maryland heightened up in the market and statistitians figure considerable value for the issue. There has been paid in an assessment of $40 a share, and the stock is only selling at 44. It is also announced that it is now a part of the New York Central system, and will be used to make Baltimore easy [illegible] Actual construction of the connecting link will be begun in six weeks and trains will be running into Baltimore from Buffalo and the West in about two years.

Edwin Hawley turned up again as the prospective purchaser of the Hocking Valley in which the Chesapeake & Ohio already owns one fifth interest. This control is held by a syndicate under the general direction of J. P. Morgan & Co.

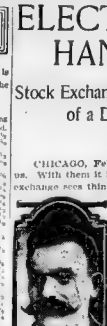
ELECTION BUGABOO HANGS OVER STREET

Stock Exchange Finds Something to Fear in Chances of a Democratic Congress in November.

By BOERSIANET.



CHICAGO, Feb. 19.—Bugaboos, like the poor, we shall always have with us. With them it is never a matter of numbers, but of proximity. The stock exchange sees things either in the near or in the middle distance. The latest banshee is in the form of the November election.

Next Autumn the Democrats are to be given a majority in the House. Once in control of the lower branch of Congress they will force an "investigation" of the United States Steel Corporation, which must ultimate in a ruinous dissolution of the Morgan company. Following this incidental diversion the Democrats will stir up trouble over the tariff schedule. They will. But what will they not do to subvert the "Street"? It is enough that the steel corporation is fated to disintegration, dismemberment, which will signal the dupping of the Morgan crest.

Who sees the fall of the house of Morgan? The financial mandarins who cannot agree with the chief mandarin on the important question of the continuation of prosperity. At least, so the lesser mandarins are informed.

The latter were told last week, also, that nothing would be done by the opponents of Morgan to dismantle him from his current confidence in the Street. He would be allowed to execute his dreams; would be permitted to realize his visions—if he can. His reconciliation to the policy of the administration would meet no interposition on the part of the groups in finance, which has everything to lose by an adverse decision in the Standard Oil decision; on the contrary, his friends, the enemy, might grease the descent.

At the bottom of all this shyster talk of downright enmity between the Messrs. Morgan and the Messrs. Kuhn Loeb-Rockefellers there is a residue of fact. The former do not fear the future. They feel certain that everything will come out all right, politically, judicially and, therefore, financially. Looking beyond the immediate effect of congressional action on the administration's recommendations, they, on mature consideration, believe the final result will be beneficial.

They hope, too, that the Supreme Court, if it decides against tobacco and all, will recommend a way of doing business legally. A member of the Morgan firm sent a letter to a Chicago banker the other day which is tremendously bracing. The other side perceives chaos in everything that the Supreme Court and Congress may do. They appear to have embraced the philosophy of negation. This is not saying that they have practiced or will put into practical effect their philosophy.

So far, the advice from that quarter has been to sell only "speculative values"; advice offered directly by the juniors of the group, not by the seniors—though, to be sure, the latter has not been taken by the rank and file of bankers and investors, though the stock exchange element had acted on it aggressively and thereby forced apostacy upon most of the pools on 'change.

But the odds remain against the pessimists. Nature and commerce are with the Morgan people. The thick blanket of snow which has covered the agricultural regions all Winter long is a fertilizer that guarantees bountiful crops. The American Congress has yet to enact a confiscatory law, and business men at large feel instinctively that what the President proposes or what the Supreme Court may dispose may not prove injurious in the end.

It may interest the East, as represented by the thoroughfare from Trinity Church to the East river, that the West is confident of a prosperous year. All that the West asks is to be let alone. It requests that high-placed money mongers stop the leak of their eccentric fears; that they cease alarming railway presidents, that they refrain from advising their western correspondents of the cause of this and that bear, for however sound a country may be physically, it must be ultimately affected by the mental poison of apprehension instilled by certain New Yorkers.

The sincerity of such apprehension is not questioned. But transmission of misgivings in a recuperative period is a gratuitous offence. Great wealth has responsibilities. It imposes the calm of a statue of Mammon in troublous times. It decrees silence in days of personal doubt.

Too much, too, was made of the foreign trade figures for January. Though not good, they were not discouraging. Part of the decrease in exports was obviously due to the high price of the commodities concerned, and securities in the corresponding time last year; and the higher prices obtained in 1910 did not compensate for the retrenchment practiced by Europeans.

By way of a telling offset, Europe was a liberal buyer of securities last week after an interval of precipitate liquidation and hesitation provoked by alarmist reports from this side.

The foreign purchases of American securities, expectedly resumed, forfend the danger of a monetary balance in favor of Europe which the decreased exports might have exacted.

It must be noted, however, that the orders for [illegible] the major portion of the investment business on the stock exchange. The rest was speculative. Bears again covered heavily. [illegible] goods paralleling in the market took heart of grace and the public rushed in to [illegible] greatly depleted accounts. Individual speculators' long faith in the Morgan position made some commitments. But the [illegible] market was conspicuously absent.

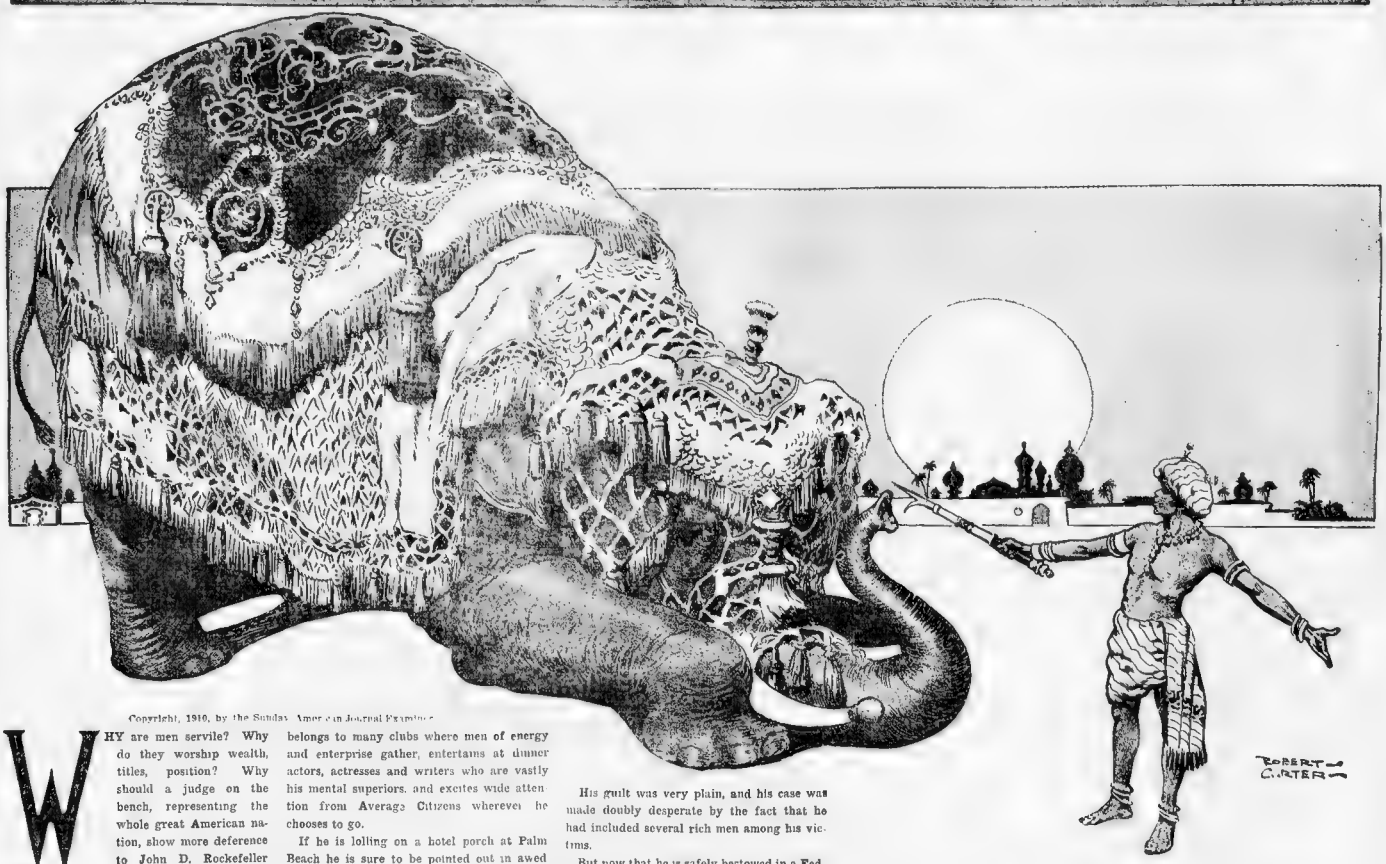
KEEP SERVILITY OUT OF YOUR CHARACTER



Copyright, 1910, by the Sunday American Journal Examiner

No Man Who Is Good for Anything Need Cringe to Other Men---Or Fear Them.

WHY are men servile? Why do they worship wealth, titles, position? Why should a judge on the bench, representing the whole great American nation, show more deference to John D. Rockefeller than to John Smith?

Boast as we will that we are a nation of kings, that every man is born free and equal and is just as good, if not better, than every other man, there is no denying that that noble American, the Average Citizen, has a deep and abiding reverence for the Man Who Has More Money.

Now, a reverence for the Man who has More Brains is justifiable, so long as it is merely reverence, and does not approach servility.

But the Average Citizen is slow to admit that any one else has more brains. He will spend hours telling you that he is just as smart, just as capable as his neighbor who lives in the big house across the street, keeps six servants, three automobiles and owns a seat on the Stock Exchange.

"Just because he has money is no sign that he has intellect," says the Average Citizen. "Lots and lots of men have money that hardly know enough to come in out of the rain."

Which is all very true; yet it does not prevent the Average Citizen from bowing very low to the rich man's money, even if he doesn't recognize his brains.

In New York recently a young man with a great deal of inherited wealth figured in a breach of promise suit brought by a dancing girl by the advice of her press agent.

The young man's letters—very foolish, pointless letters—were given out by the girl, and published. They proved pretty conclusively that this particular rich man didn't have any brains worth mentioning—that his intelligence was considerably below that of the average fourteen-year-old boy.

Nevertheless the same young man is received by men of intelligence and education, belongs to many clubs where men of energy and enterprise gather, entertains at dinner actors, actresses and writers who are vastly his mental superiors, and excites wide attention from Average Citizens wherever he chooses to go.

If he is lolling on a hotel porch at Palm Beach he is sure to be pointed out in awed whispers by other guests. Many a man of twenty times his usefulness would go a long way to meet him; and his doings have such real public interest that they are of actual value as news.

Why? Because he has money, and money is always interesting to those who haven't got it.

It was not so very long ago that a banker who had been calmly investing his depositors' good money in wildcat schemes was accidentally tripped up in the meshes of the law. Accidentally, because it was when he fell foul of the interests of a client of a very shrewd and powerful lawyer that he was sent to jail.

He was arrested, not like an ordinary offender, but with much hemming and hawing and expressions of regret on the part of the very gentlemanly detective who took him into custody.

At the Tombs he was given a large, light cell, permitted to send out for all his meals, and for his accommodation a chair was placed in the corridor outside his cell, so that he might dictate to his stenographer through the bars.

But he still chafed under restraint.

Through his lawyers he sent word to a Justice of the United States Court that he wanted to go downtown and attend to business—he was losing money by his confinement.

Imagine how such a message from a burglar would be received by the honorable court! But in this case the Justice agreed with the prisoner. He was allowed to go downtown and attend to his business, and downtown he went—in custody, of course, but at liberty as far as his ability to attend to business was concerned.

Fortunately there was no loophole in the law which was large enough to let through such a big scoundrel as this man happened to be.

His guilt was very plain, and his case was made doubly desperate by the fact that he had included several rich men among his victims.

But now that he is safely bestowed in a Federal penitentiary, his name exchanged for a number and his fare and clothes no better than those of the lesser offenders surrounding him, there is actually a wave of public sympathy in his favor.

"I'll admit he's a thief and all that," says the Average Citizen, "but doesn't it seem pretty hard to think how he has to live after being used to all that luxury?"

In a good many instances servility does no harm save to its possessor. But in a case like this it does a great deal of harm. It is quite possible that in time public sympathy may be so thoroughly aroused in this rascal's favor that an excuse will be found for pardoning him. Then others of his ilk will smile quietly and take up their robberies where they left them off when the fear of the penitentiary fell upon them, and all the good energy and honest effort that was expended in putting one prominent thief in jail will have gone for nothing.

It is not true that every man is more or less of a toady. It is not true that servility exists in a greater or smaller degree in every human mind.

The important men of to-day, as well as those of the past, have not had any of it. Far from being an aid to success, it is a hindrance.

The wise employer wants respect and obedience from those who work for him. If he is the right kind of an employer he gets the respect. If he has the right kind of employes he gets the obedience. He does not exact servility; nor does any man advance in his estimation by being servile to him.

It may be said by the man who cringes to wealth and toadies to position that his traits are inherited from ancestors who had to cringe and toady to kings and noblemen or endanger their necks.

But between the present generation of Americans and his king-fearing ancestors came that race of independent citizens who fought and won the Revolutionary War.

They did not cringe to any one, and when they said that all men were created free and equal they believed what they said.

To-day in America there is no more reason for cringing to wealth than there is for the great elephant in this cartoon bowing to the puny little Hindoo who has mastered him.

If the elephant understood his strength he would be very likely to go about his own affairs, paying no attention whatever to the Hindoo or his steel prod.

The Average Citizen, taken collectively, in proportion to the few men who would drive him, wields a power infinitely greater than that of the elephant over his dusky master.

His forefathers have earned for him the right to use that power wisely and fearlessly.

He need fear neither wealth nor position, and, furthermore, HE OUGHT NEVER TO LET HIS REPRESENTATIVES, WHETHER ON THE BENCH OR IN THE CONGRESS AND THE STATE LEGISLATURES, FEAR EITHER WEALTH OR POSITION.

The man, or the nation, that is open and fearless inspires respect. Servility breeds indirection in character, and indirection is dishonesty. When a man who has learned to study human nature is approached by some fawning, humble creature he not only despises but suspects him.

Uriah Heep, the most unpleasant of all of Dickens' many characters, used the cloak of servility to fool his betters. He fooled them better in Dickens' story than he would ever have fooled them in real life, for at the first mention of the fellow and his methods the reader becomes disgusted.

If such a character came into the office of any business man seeking employment he would not get it. If he did manage to worm himself into the favor of some foolish man he would soon bring himself and his employer into general bad repute.

No one can deny that there is vast room for improvement in American politeness, especially in the North. But politeness and servility are far apart. It does not take long to tell whether a man is fawning upon you or merely using ordinary civility. The latter any man has a right to expect. But none but a self-satisfied prig expects others to be servile or will tolerate that quality when he finds it.

Servility has no place in the character of the American citizen or in the character of the American nation.

It is a quality that human beings should long ago have outgrown, and any man who finds he still possesses it will do well to get rid of it as speedily as possible, and look every man, whether rich or poor, high or low, squarely in the eye, deal with him fearlessly and honestly, and expect the same kind of dealing in return.

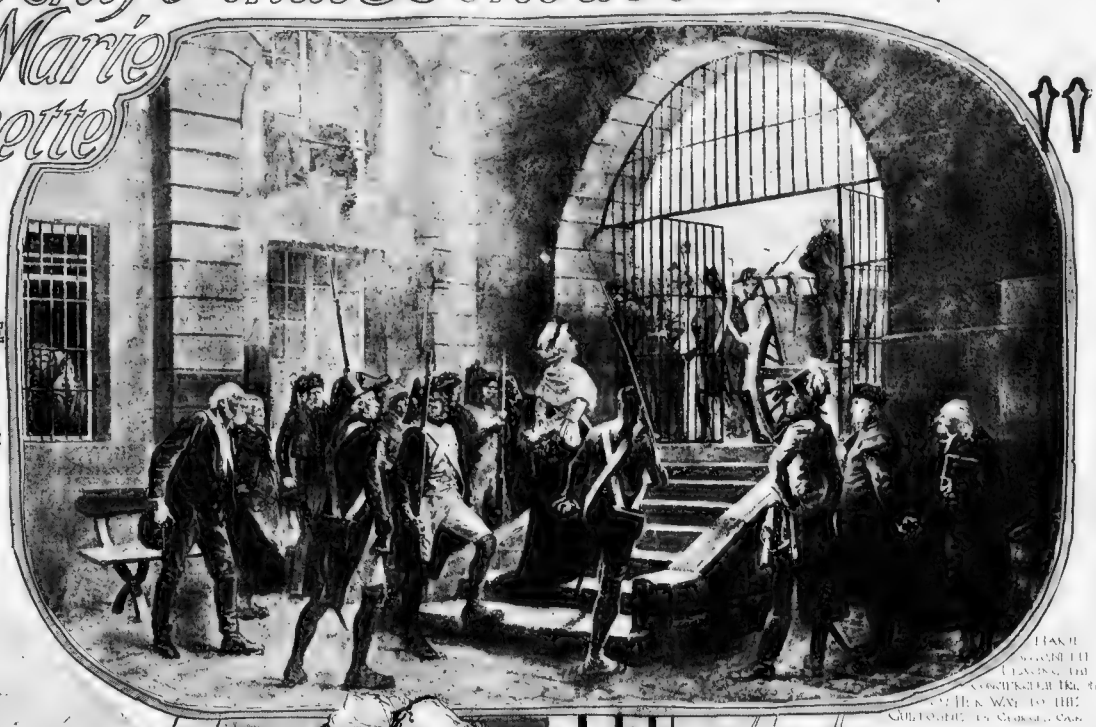
The Knife that Beheaded Poor Marie Antoinette

Long Lost Relic of the Greatest Tragedy of the Reign of Terror Newly Recovered. Its Curious History Traced.



THE NEWLY RECOVERED KNIFE OF THE GUILLOTINE THAT BEHEADED QUEEN MARIE ANTOINETTE AND KING LOUIS XVI.

Paris, February 10

THE actual guillotine with which poor Queen Marie Antoinette and her husband, King Louis XVI, were decapitated has been discovered. It was found in the collection of a private collector at Antwerp, in Belgium, and it is now proposed to buy it for the French Government as an important relic of the most exciting period of French history.

It is only the blade which has been found, but that is obviously the principal part, and may well be called the guillotine.

The history of the relic has been completely traced by M. Gustave Babin, an authority on antiquarian objects, and fully confirmed. It seems that the blade of this and other guillotines were purloined by a previous executioner on account of their value as curiosities. This blade was, of course, the most valuable one. It was necessary to sell it abroad, for otherwise its loss would have been discovered by the French Government, and thus it found its way into Belgium.

In 1843 M. Dubois, director of the public markets of Brussels, bought the blade from Mme. Roch, widow of the French execu-

Repairing Your Teeth by X Ray Photographs.

How the Modern Dentist Employs the Powerful Light to Find Out What Is the Matter With Your Teeth, Instead of Extracting them or Lancing In the Painful Manner of Former Days.

Taking a Radiograph of a Diseased Tooth. A Small Film Is Placed Between the Patient's Teeth, and the Powerful X-Ray is Directed At It Perpendicularly.

A [illegible] or X-ray picture is obtained of the [illegible] portion of the [illegible] practised eye of the dentist the exact [illegible] conditions prevailing there. Every part [illegible] of the tooth, the bony tissue in which the root is imbedded, and the relative position of adjoining teeth, are plainly shown, and the dentist is in a position to remedy the evil without any preliminary pain or loss of time.

This is, of course, a wonderful improvement over the old way, and marks a new epoch in dentistry. The new treatment is of especial importance, in view of the recent discovery that a large number of cases of insanity may be directly traced to the existence of [illegible] teeth.

The use of the X-ray machine in dentistry is simple. A specially [illegible] film is placed in the mouth, [illegible] in position either with the [illegible] fingers or by the employment of a simple device, the current is turned on, the rays being directed at the [illegible] patient's mouth, and after a slight [illegible] space, the radiograph is made. So strong are the rays and the sensitivity of the film that no exposure need exceed forty seconds, and in the case of [illegible] teeth, a second, or was cannot be made to rest in still, the plate may be made almost instantaneously [illegible]. With such short exposures as these injury from the ray is [illegible] out of the question.

The value of the result obtained is not at once apparent to the unskilled observer. The film reveals a more or less distorted picture of one, two or three teeth, which to the uninitiated conveys absolutely no meaning. Only a few teeth can be shown on each film, because owing to the curvature of the jaws only the two or three teeth perpendicular to the path of the ray can be shown well-centred. While it is possible to take the entire arch upon one film, the result thus obtained is not satisfactory.

To interpret these films accurately requires considerable experience. This is because the radiograph is not a photograph. It is not an image, but a shadow picture, it simply shows the relative densities of the various parts through which the X-ray traversed. Thus metallic fillings appear as black masses, root fillings as somewhat less dense streaks; the enamel and dentine are next in density, while the root canal shows plainly as a light channel in the dentine, and the bony process of the jaw in which the teeth are imbedded shows in various degrees of density, depending upon its thickness.

In the Olden Days the Dentist's Outfit Consisted of a Strong Arm and a Pair of Pliers.

Where the child suffers more pain than is consistent with the normal shedding of its milk teeth and their replacement by the permanent set, instead of extracting the temporary teeth, which is always an unwise step, an X-ray picture can be depended upon to disclose the precise situation, and the dentist may be able to remedy the trouble, without extracting a single tooth.

The radiograph, too, may reveal in such a case that certain of the permanent teeth are so irregular that unless their course is controlled they will make their appearance at improper places. Prompt treatment may in such a case avert serious trouble.

The value of the use of [illegible] in the detection of an abscess the exact site of which is in doubt is well illustrated by the report of a case treated by a well-known dentist.

"Prior to taking the picture," he declares, "there was no definite [illegible] as to determining which tooth was at fault, for all the teeth in the vicinity were equally tender, and there was no evidence on the gum of the trouble that was ensuing within the jawbone. The patient was almost frantic with pain. Upon examination of the X-ray [illegible] the position of the abscess was at once disclosed and a simple operation was sufficient to all that was needed to [illegible] from pain was immediate, and the healing prompt."

Even in cases where the location of the trouble is known, the radiograph is of assistance in showing just what area is involved.

In the extraction of teeth, too, the radiograph has its use. It will show the size and direction of the roots of a tooth, or, in the case of young children it may show the absence of the permanent tooth which is supposed to take the place of the one to be extracted.

To mention but [illegible] nervous diseases may be produced by various dental ills, Dr. [illegible], a Western physician, began a careful [illegible] of the subject some [illegible] years ago, recently published the results of his work. By means of the X-ray machine he was able to form some [illegible] of the conclusions.

One of his patients was a [illegible] twenty-seven years old. When first seen she had been [illegible] for a year. She had persistent insomnia [illegible] was [illegible] was quite [illegible] been quite [illegible] with [illegible] by [illegible] and [illegible] of [illegible] avail. The teeth, which were apparently in perfect normal [illegible] examined by the X-ray. The radiograph disclosed an impacted upper [illegible] was [illegible] had never in her life had a [illegible] one [illegible] in [illegible] jaws. She began to sleep well within a week or ten days after the extraction of the tooth, and the distressing and menacing symptoms disappeared. To-day she is absolutely normal.

The explanation of cases of this kind lies in the fact that the jaws conceal [illegible] sensitive nerves which have [illegible] with the brain. The roots of the impacted tooth very often [illegible] one of these nerves and trouble naturally follows.

As a result of the numerous cases which the subject of a picture is [illegible] no more dangerous than [illegible] to the [illegible] of an ordinary [illegible].

[illegible] the introduction of the X-ray [illegible] is the most radical [illegible] in the [illegible] of [illegible]. That [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

100 Ways to Read Your Indian Baskets and Pottery.

Every One of These Strange Designs and Marks Has a Meaning Plain to the Savage Maker---and Here Is Their Dictionary.

A VERY great number of those who have in their houses the unique and artistic baskets and the fictions of the Navajo, Apache and Pueblo Indians make, their pottery or their blankets have often wondered what the odd decorations on these articles mean. The Persians can weave a whole chapter of the Koran into a rug and make it very decorative. Have the American Indians the same facility?

They have, and every mark and design on woven baskets, clay bowl or dish and blanket could tell a story if we could read it, in rendering the object even more valuable and interesting to its possessors. Ethnologists have recently been able to form a dictionary of these symbols, the main features of which are reproduced on this page.

Among the Tuscayan Indians of the Southwest, the Moki, Hopi and Zuni tribes who occupy the pueblos of Northeastern Arizona, the art of pottery and basket making has reached a high degree and these articles have a wide market. The Navajo is mostly known from his blankets. The Arapahoe, too, has developed a distinct culture.

Every decoration is an attempt to picture a concrete thing or to express an idea. But in most cases the original meaning of these designs is forgotten. Many of the descriptions are still deciphered only with some difficulty, and the main reason for such explanation. Such symbols have been gradually ascertained by the American ethnologists and students of antiquarians, others have been ascertained for the ethnologists by the aged Indian priest, whose confidence he has gained by a long and previous acquaintanceship.

Some of the most interesting symbols are those painted on the body itself. When the Indians go to perform a ceremony or sacred dance, the entire body, except for the breech cloth, is divested of clothing and covered with paint. Each tribe has a distinct method of painting. The Moki Indians, for instance, paint the body in spots, while the Navajos have a system of stripes and lines. Each of these methods has a distinct meaning, and the Indians have a lasting symbolic tattoo.

Symbolism is the association or connection of two different things, which however, resemble each other in one or more particulars, and one of which is more easily able to stand for the other than the other is. A whole world is a representation of the earth. Before the earth existed, when water covered everything, the Great Spirit is said to have built up a few symbols, or mark, from this the "Great Spirit" or Creator, made the earth on which he lives. He is the turtle, that is put upon the altar, it becomes a sign of it. Moreover, the turtle is round, and its back is hard and

HOW TO DO WHAT YOU WANT TO DO

The Three Kinds of People in the World--the Wills, the Wont's and the Cant's.

From "The Education of the Will," by I. Sharper Knowlson, published by I. Werner Laurie, London.

"It is as if a girl who had never touched a piano sat down to play the last movement of the Waldstein Sonata."

CHERE is no necessity to be more than superficially interested in the subject of force of mind. Dr. Smiles has been quite right in declaring that the thought-force is more dynamic and existent than the fuel dynamic. But the methods of observation and experiment has been opened up, and individual workers are now in the making and recording results. For a long time neither science nor the Bible Secondary suggestion has been dead, but, by a curse of the pendulum, mind is about to claim the prior place.

It is impossible to enter into any real discussion of individuality or character, without some will to the existence of a force which we call mind. Psychologists may write books about the association of ideas, and about early impressions, and about the memory, but they will be forced to admit that the mainspring is force. We have thought in the case of succession and reflection and we have still in the case of the faculties needed to track the forgotten past.

The will is the controlling force that is the final element in mind.

But the mind as a whole, we cannot proceed to the study of it, unless we realize the intellectual, moral, and feeling, and then further recognize these as the factors in its development. Personality. And for the education of the

It is not enough to say that we have an overcoming that we learn to overcome, by electing reason and conscience that we learn to elect, and every right action which we cause is a strong nail of pure principles. come from responsible medical men. The world is full of drift of opinion among doctors has generally been in favor of the over-power of the patient's imagination and will in effecting a cure; the wonder is that so few have been willing to go more deeply into the subject in order to make a more scientific use of this mental factor.

A critical reading of the specimen cases quoted suggests the following claims:

(1) Mental suggestion with others can unconsciously effect changes in organic functions.

(2) Faith, expectation, credulity, and even reverence (in excess of certain physical conditions) can cure disease.

(3) Will power, consciously and confidently exercised, can cure serious diseases.

Now, the facts we have illustrated and connect are these:

(1) Mind and body are bound together in the closest unity.

(2) Mind force is supreme.

An Arab fable says that one day a traveller met the Plague going to cairo, and asked what was the object of his journey. The Plague replied that he was going to kill 10,000 people. Some time afterwards the traveller met the Plague on its return journey, and complained that thirty thousand had been killed. "I am not responsible for that," protested the Plague. "I only killed three thousand. The other twenty-seven thousand died of fright at my arrival."

A fitting counterpart to the above fable is given by Goethe, who says that Napoleon visited them after the plague, to show that the man who could vanquish fear could vanquish the plague as well. "And he was right."

The moral to be drawn from the fable is that the mind is not the only factor in destroying the body and your life is a state of selfcure which repels all hurtful influence, whilst fear invites them.

The systematic use of will power previously referred to now calls for remark. We make the mind, or over-use nervous energy, the servant of the dumbbell, every formal action of the body, in bringing health to you. To go through any system of exercise as a duty, and not as a pleasure, is failing to do it gregariously, be-

My Secrets of Beauty.

No. 60 - Timely Questions and Answers.

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.

SO MANY queries from interested readers of this page have come to Mme. Cavalieri that she gives her entire attention to-day to answering the more frequent and representative of them. She has aimed also to reply to the most timely.

She advises her readers to treasure rain water as gold in the treasure box of beauty aids. She tells of a remedy for sunburn that is equally valuable for the wind-burn that is an affliction of this season.

Next week's article will be of extraordinary interest. She will write of "The Quiet Treatment," describing a method of conserving vital force and preserving beauty, which she learned when she was fast in Europe.

Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

By Lina Cavalieri.

SO many questions have come to me that I am unable to answer in the limited space at the close of my articles that I shall give to-day's page to an attempt to answer the most important and general ones. Paul Poiret comes a letter that may be considered a typical one, and in answering it I shall be answering similar letters, with slight deviations from this original pattern.

I am a young girl of thirteen years, and I am losing my correspondents. "I have been advised (still better) how and how to remove a fine, clear complexion, as I want to put on the cosmetic before leaving home for the opera. Kindly tell me how you do it, as the time appointed (perhaps not by you) is very short."

Now, a girl of thirteen should not have any cosmetics whatever on her face. "Vanity Fair" cannot be in the make-up of a child. She should be pumped out of bed and sent round the corner the instant she asks for it. The presumption is that in the case mentioned the mother was responsible for the child's vanity, and, not discovering "dressed" in time, outlasted the search.

At midnight he awoke with the certain he wanted, and although he did not say: "That is a stroke of genius," he did do something originally, as far as I pleased with himself as to not need for those three lines, still no to the world of art similar results are

One of the most general grievances of the correspondents of this page which was composed of full-page dealing cheek. This seems to show that the creative function is not in fact one of the internal intelligence is asleep. Hence the wisdom of selecting for the purpose of the waking intelligence as being "at best for the purposes of auto-suggestion.

Auto-suggestion compels a man to rely upon himself. Thus thereby says Emerson, "every heart vibrates to the iron string." Here there is no leaning on moral casually engraved in another's character, but on a genuine reaching of the blood in the surface of the face by a self-originated spirit of power.

Those are among the creams which I recommend because of their purity:

Rosewater	2 ozs.

Oil of sweet almonds	2½ ozs.
Cream tartar	½ oz.

"I recommend, when superfluous hair on the face becomes bristles, electrolysis."

"Make a stiff paste of French chalk or Fuller's earth and apply to the face for windburn."

"Rainwater is the best of all cosmetics."

"Scar tissue may be dissolved by injecting a dissolving substance directly into it."

"Before putting on gloves for the night rub thoroughly into the hands a pure cold cream."

From an upright town comes questions from the mother of two children. She writes what the public vanity, how to begin to train a proper desire to preserve her complexion. She would like to be putting in much of rest to begin now to print a recipe for making the neck and bust fully and more shapely.

From Brooklyn comes a request to know how to remove the blackheads which have been left after the disappearance of pimples.

Blackheads come, sometimes called cloudlets. This is the dirt of the skin which has the peculiar property of absorbing the sebum, which has the remarkable property of turning black on exposure to the air. This sebum, or fatty substance, is the oil of the sebaceous glands, which are found in the skin of most parts of the body. Sometimes the oil is not absorbed and a blister lasts.

Blackheads are easily removed by the use of soap with an upper use, savings, its effect being to soften the sebum, so that the pressure and sensuity on the surface, exactly as the pressure of the thumb and finger from a bit of muslin and the muslin treated soft. Although this is a tedious process, it is probably the most effective.

The Judgment of Peter and Paul on Olympus

by Henryk Sienkiewicz

A Poem in Prose by the Famous Author of "Quo Vadis."

"Paul, bending toward a cluster of white field lilies, broke off one blossom, and touching her with it, said: "'Joy, be henceforth like this flower, and live thou for mankind.'"

It was a night of Spring, calm, silvery, and fragrant with dewy jasmine. The full moon was sailing above Olympus, and on the glittering, snowy summit of the mountain it shone with a clear, pensive, grecnish light. Farther down, in the Vale of Tempe was a dark thicket of thornbushes, shaken by the songs of nightingales —by entreaties, by complaints, by calls, by allurements, by laughter, by sighs. These sounds flowed like the music of flutes, filling the night; they fell like a pouring rain, and rushed on like rivers. At moments they ceased; then such silence followed that one might almost hear the snow thawing on the heights under the warm breath of May. It was an enchanted night.

On that night came Peter and Paul, and sat on the highest grass-mound of the slope to pass judgment on the gods of antiquity. The heads of the Apostles were encircled by halos, which illuminated their gray hair, stern brows, and severe eyes. Below, in the deep shade of beeches, stood the assembly of gods, abandoned and in dread, awaiting their sentence.

Peter motioned with his hand, and at the sign Zeus stepped forth first from the assembly and approached the Apostles. The Cloud-Compeller was still mighty, and as huge as if cut out of marble by Phidias, but weakened and gloomy. His old eagle dragged along at his feet with broken wing, and the blue thunderbolt, grown reddish in places from rust, and partly quenched, seemed to be slipping from the stiffening right hand of the former father of gods and men. But when he stood before the Apostles the feeling of ancient supremacy filled his broad breast. He raised his head haughtily, and fixed on the face of the aged fisherman of Galilee his proud and glittering eyes, which were as angry and as terrible as lightnings.

Olympus, accustomed to tremble before its ruler, shook to its foundations. The beeches quivered with fear, the song of the nightingales ceased, and the moon sailing above the snows grew as white as the linen web of Arachne. The eagle screamed through his crooked beak for the last time, and the lightning, as if animated by its ancient force, flashed and began to roar terribly at the feet of its master; it reared, hissed, snapped, and raised its three-cornered, flaming forehead, like a serpent ready to stab with poisonous fang. But Peter pressed the fiery bolts with his foot and crushed them to the earth. Turning then to the Cloud-Compeller, he pronounced this sentence: "Thou art cursed and condemned through all eternity." At once Zeus was extinguished. Growing pale in the twinkle of an eye, he whispered, with blackening lips, "necessity," and vanished though the earth.

Poseidon of the dark curls next stood before the Apostles, with night in his eyes, and in his hand the blunted trident. To him then spoke Peter:

"It is not thou who wilt rouse the billows. It is not thou who wilt lead the storm-tossed ships to a quiet haven, but she who is called the 'Star of the Sea.'"

When Poseidon heard this he screamed, as if pierced with sudden pain, and turned into vanishing mist.

Next rose Apollo, the Silver-bowed, with a hollow lute in his hand, and walked toward the holy men. Behind him moved slowly the nine Muses, looking like nine white pillars. Terror-stricken, they stood before the judgment-seat, as if petrified, breathless, and without hope; but the radiant Apollo turned to Paul, and, in a voice which resembled wondrous music, said:

"Slay me not! Protect me, lord; for shouldst thou slay me, thou wouldst have to restore me to life again. I am the blossom of the soul of humanity; I am its gladness; I am light; I am the yearning for God. Thou knowest best that the song of earth will not reach heaven if thou break its wings. Hence I implore thee, O saint, not to smite down Song."

A moment of silence came. Peter raised his eyes toward the stars. Paul placed his hands on his sword-hilt, rested his forehead on them, and for a time fell into deep thought. At last he rose, made the sign of the cross calmly above the radiant head of the god, and said:

"Let Song live!"

Apollo sat down with his lute at the feet of the Apostle. The night became clearer, the jasmine gave out a stronger perfume, the glad fountains sounded, the Muses gathered together like a flock of white swans, and, with voices still quivering from fear, began to sing in low tones marvellous words never heard on the heights of Olympus till that hour:

To thy protection we flee, holy Mother of God.
We come with our prayers; deign thou not to reject us,
But be pleased to preserve us from every evil,
O thou, our Lady!

Thus they sang on the heather, raising their eyes like pious nuns with heads covered with white.

Other gods came now, baseless and ill, chorus dashed past, wild, unrestrained, crowned with ivy and grapevine, and bearing the cithara and the thyrsus. They rushed on madly, with shouts of despair, and fell into the bottomless pit.

Then before the Apostles stood a lofty, proud, sarcastic divinity, who, without waiting for question or sentence, spoke first. On her lips was a smile of derision.

"I am Pallas Athene. I do not beg life of you. I am an illusion, nothing more. Odysseus honored and obeyed me only when he had become senile. Telemachus listened to me only till hair covered his chin. Ye cannot take immortality from me, and I declare that I have been a shadow, that I am a shadow now, and shall remain a shadow forever."

At last her turn came to the most beautiful, the most honored goddess. As she approached, sweet, marvellous, tearful, the heart under her snow-white breast beat like the heart in a bird, and her lips quivered like those of a child that fears cruel punishment. She fell at their feet, and, stretching forth her divine arms, cried in fear and humility:

"I am sinful. I deserve blame, but I am Joy. Have mercy, forgive, I am the one happiness of mankind." Then sobbing and fear took away her voice.

But Peter looked at the goddess with compassion, and placed his aged palm on her golden hair, while Paul, bending toward a cluster of white field lilies, broke off one blossom, and touching her with it, said:

"Joy, be henceforth like this flower, and live thou for mankind."

Then came dawn—the divine dawn that looked out from beyond a depression between two peaks. The nightingales stopped singing, and immediately finches, linnets and wrens began to draw their sleepy little heads from under their moistened wings, shaking the dew from their feathers, and repeating in low voices, "Stil! stil! ("Light! light!").

The earth awoke, smiled, and was delighted, because Song and Joy had not been taken from it.

WHO KILLED PROFESSOR GREER?

THE MYSTERY OF THE RED ROOM---By William Le Queux.

Copyright, in the United States of America, 1909, by William Le Queux.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

MUCH money surrounds Kershaw Kirk, who lives modestly in Bath Road, Bedford Park, London, in the midst of Holford, motor engineer and dealer in motor cars, who lives with his wife a few doors away. Holford is a widower, and his daughter Mabel is admired in the height of fashion, in company with notable persons. One story comes with Kirk calling Holford at his motor shop on a Sunday morning, and another when Holford visits him. Kirk describes himself as a "dealer in secrets," who will be suspected of a served murder when more is found out about the body of a man found in the Yard, and in England he cannot be arrested. Holford is bored and a gentleman. He has picked out Mabel, who promises Holford that she will not marry Kirk. Kirk proposes to

IF GIANTS CAME TO EARTH

YOU doubtless have often heard the expression "knee-high to a grasshopper," as applied to the diminutive size of a boy in his very young days, but can you conceive of a village with real churches, houses, railway stations, factories and all "knee-high" to a boy?

There is just such a Lilliputian community, and it isn't in fairyland either. It is the handiwork of some boys living in Surrey, England—bright, clever little fellows, who have taken the very materials that big cities are made of—solid stone, cement, brick and iron—and constructed a miniature town that would look small even to Tom Thumb.

The work has been part of a training school campaign on novel lines. The boys attend the Philanthropic Society's farm school at Redhill, Surrey, and this work, while a pastime in a sense, is fundamentally a course of instruction in the different mechanical and constructive trades. In addition to verbal instruction in these arts it was desired that the boys should have practical experience in the execution of them. The common idea of using models in the classroom was laid aside and in its place was substituted the more extensive plan of setting apart a large expanse of the school's land on which the boys could actually construct streets, buildings, bridges and all else which now makes a part of the wonderful village which has sprung up under their clever touch.

It is the only enterprise of its kind in the world, but is such a success that it no doubt will be widely copied.

The highest edifice in this novel town is the church, and its beautiful little steeple, towering high above the neighboring buildings, reaches just to the boys' knees. So you can get some idea of what diminutive structures this doll-like village is composed.

As we, who have not the privilege of visiting this remarkable town, look at it through out mind's eye and the accompanying illustrations, we find ourselves much in the position and with the perspective of a man who has eaten some of H. G. Wells's "Food of the Gods," which food, as the story goes, increased one's stature five times or more.

A man who indulged in this diet soon found himself so out of perspective to his surroundings that he had to be careful not to kick houses over, or trample ordinary people under his feet. If he wasn't cautious he'd "bark" his shins against a church spire or stub his toe if we may take the liberty of assuming the state of a giant's mind upon how we would have to exert the same coming to human habitations, we would degree of care if we visited this little city that the first thing that would attract our lofty attention would be the giant's village in England, and, by reason of the fact his attention and arouse his curiosity of each detail in its construction, accuracy of each detail in its construction, after the people themselves, would ly transform us into great beings and from our lofty elevation we could look down, with the curiosity of a giant, upon the structures hardly large enough for us to get a foot inside.

The only thing missing, from a giant's point of view, would be the people that lived in this wonderful community. Everything else is there—church, dwellings, barns, bridges, railroad stations, railroad lines, farms, and, what adds greatly to the realism of it all, the ruins of an old abbey, vine-covered and in the last stages of decay.

Miniature locomotives of very latest pattern and furnished with all the intricate machinery of engines of the "Mogul" type drawn trains made up of Pullmans, regular coaches, baggage, mail and freight cars. And, mind you, the number of these cars conforms exactly with that of the large ones in which we ride. Then there are other appurtenances to transportation, such as well equipped stations, sidings and safety block signals.

As the giant's eye roved over one of our towns, his attention would naturally be drawn next by the High Street, most prominent structure in the town, and in the community of which we are telling. This would be the church—an architectural, mechanical and artistic wonder. The pyramids, Sphinx, Eiffel Tower and Colossus at Rhodes are called "wonders" because they are so large—and for no other reason. This tiny church is entitled to a degree of the same consideration because it is as small. The accompanying illustration gives an idea of its exterior, but, as in the case of the steam cars, mentioned above, the inside of this miniature house of worship is finished and furnished just as the one which we (or we do not) attend.

As the giant's eye continued to roam he would note a large number of little places similar in character and design shown to us as houses, and as for the might be nothing distinctive about any of them he might take off a roof or two and explore within. If we uprooted some of the tiny dwellings in the pigmy village of Surrey we would find quite as much to explore. Everything is in order.

The Squire's mansion was a fine billiard room, with a proper slate-bedded table, and in the houses of the elite are to be found comfortable drawing rooms, banquet halls, dancing halls and bowling alleys. In the barns we find the implements of the farmer, with accommodations for the live stock. Carrying out our illusion of the giant, we would be impressed with the tiny and with its spanned by an iron-girdered beds, tables, chairs, ranges, etc., with bridge capable of bearing the weight of which the cottages are furnished. In our giant's grasp. On the upper surface our giant forms. On the upper surface of this river are real working locks that would be capable of passing a boat. On the banks are typical river loungeries with rustic backing, all in the form of fences, to keep out imaginary marauders. Through the town the boys row each day, keeping the roads in order and attending to the necessary cleaning and repairing of estates.

It is truly a world in miniature and makes up no small part of the gigantic, cumbersome genius of art.

Eyeglasses Not Necessary

That the eyes can be strengthened is that eyeglasses can be dispensed with in many cases has been demonstrated by the instrument recently perfected and published by Dr. Arthur Eastman, of Dayton, O. This instrument is said to be most beneficial in relieving weak eyes, eye strain, headaches, etc. Artificial aids to vision are generally considered injurious, without curing or doing away with the cause, so 75,000 persons have written Dr. Eastman for his booklet explaining the principles of the Actina Appliance. SUPERFLUOUS HAIR CURED

A Well Known Lady Will Send Free to Any Sufferer the Secret Which Cured Her.

From childhood I was distressed and humiliated by an unwelcome growth of hair on my face and arms. I tried all the depilatories, pastes, liquids, creams and other rub-on preparations I ever heard of, only to make it worse. For weeks I suffered the electric needle without being rid of my blemish. I spent thousands of dollars in vain, until a friend recommended a simple preparation. I sent for it, used it in accordance with directions, and in a few days all traces of hair had vanished. I will send full particulars free to enable any other sufferer to achieve the same happy results privately at home. All I ask is a 2c. stamp for reply. I am Building the Dan Patch Electric Railroad and Offer You this Opportunity to Make Money with Me in this Enterprise

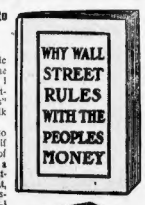
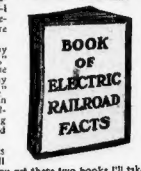
I Will Give You $1000 Voting Stock, FREE, in Addition to Your Small Investment.





I BELIEVE I can show you the best electric investment opportunity that ever came to your notice—I firmly believe it and I have backed up my belief by a $100,000 investment myself. I don't want you to say "yes" or "no" until you give me a chance to talk with you a little while.

If you've got some money that you want to place where it will bring you big returns, or if you want to invest a little each month out of your income, just pin your faith to me for a little while until I can lay before you an investment proposition that strikes me as a great, big money-maker for the people, and the indisputable facts bear me out in my judgment—I want you to have all the facts and then I believe you will want to put your money where it will work for you, and you only.

Now, the first thing to do is to send for my big 40-page "Book of Electric Railroad Facts," which I'll mail you free, and at the same time I also send you my other Book called, "Why Wall Street Rules with the People's Money." When you get these two books, which contain all the facts about the Dan Patch Electric Railroad and about me, personally, then I'm willing for you to sit in the quiet of your home and pass judgment on the whole proposition.

I just want you to have these two free books that will open your eyes about banks and Wall Street and investments in general; and when you get these two books I'll take my chances on whether you'll say "Savage is wrong" or "Savage is right," and it won't interfere with our feelings of friendship if you never invest a dollar or never write me again. I offer you these two books free—I want to show you how you can make your money work and earn for you.

Now, just a minute, while I give you a few facts. Perhaps nine out of ten readers of this paper know me already, but to those who do not, I want to say that I've been doing a national and international business out of Minneapolis for the past 22 years. My business is now the largest of its kind in the world—made so by the continued patronage of nearly three million thinking, progressive, hard-working farmers and stock-raisers.

These people are my friends and customers—many have already invested in my new enterprise—some from your own State and from every State in the Union and every Province in Canada.

I have built up a number of big enterprises here in the Northwest and now I'm building the biggest of them all. The Yes, the Dan Patch Electric Railroad, running from Minneapolis to Rochester, and back from Lakeville to St. Paul.

I am not merely "thinking" of building this Railroad, I am really building it now—grading on the first section is about completed and we have started grading on the last division from Owatonna to Rochester.

I m working to make this the best-constructed and biggest dividend-paying Electric Railroad in the country. High-class Electric Roads from New York to Spokane are great money-makers. I tell you all about it in my Big Book. This is the second time I have given the people a chance to share with me—my other enterprise paid 8 per cent in less than one year—the dividend checks were mailed out on June 1st.

Now is your chance to share with me in this enterprise—the greatest of them all. I will give you $1,000 in voting stock in addition to a small investment. I want to send you the estimated net-profit statement, showing how a $5,000 investment grows to $17,280.00. How a $1,000 investment grows to $3,456.00 in a single operating year. How a $500 investment grows to $1,728, and a $100 investment increases to $345.60 in a single operating year. This information is contained in my big "Book of Electric Railroad Facts." I want you to have it even though you never invest a dollar, and I am especially anxious for you to have my new Book, "Why Wall Street Rules with the People's Money."

Don't be backward about sending for these books. I want you to have them and they won't cost you a cent—they are free—some of those Wall Street secrets will open your eyes. I want you to see how the people's money works for Wall Street. I want to show you how to make your money work for you and for no one else. Send for the two books now.

Big Florida Book Free!

Send for this great book that tells all about the pioneer of the "Florida Land Rush"—Charles H. Sieg—and how he turned the attention of capital and labor to the possibilities of Florida small farms.

It tells in graphic style the earnings of an acre in this great Burbank-Ocala Colony, which is startling the whole country with the great rush of Northern farmers and city people to its small farms.

It is without doubt the greatest piece of land literature ever issued by any company, for it is simply an array of photographic proofs of actual 1910 scenes, backed up with the proof from officials, merchants, bankers, fruit growers and vegetable raisers.

No matter where you are thinking of locating a home, you should do yourself the justice of reading this great book.

That is what your savings will do for you, if you will become the owner of a Burbank-Ocala tract of land.

The great book which will be sent to you for the coupon below tells all about the way such incomes are earned on just a few acres.

You will like the manner in which this land is described, and the great country which surrounds it on every side.

You are not going to a wilderness when you locate upon this colony land—it is traversed by two great trunk line railroads, the Atlantic Coast Line and the Seaboard Air Line, while a small State line railroad intersects these two railroads.

Here one has the finest of roads, the most delightful of breezes, an even temperature—73 degrees the yearly average—good county schools, daily papers, rural mail routes, local and long distance telephones, a colony house with a corps of colony and agricultural experts at hand, and, on the whole, just an ideal community, with the charm of the pleasure resort closely bound with the ability to earn an independent income as long as you live.

This book and its companion proof will convince you, like it has hundreds of others, and will make you think more of the future, and how your little savings of today will make that future more certain than anything you have ever read.
